Today

Two Days Old.
Comfort and Bigness.
There Is Improvement.
Mr. Baer's Few Words.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WE ARE actually in the New Year, now two days old. Soon nearly all of us will have forgotten that it is a new year and go along in the usual humdrum way.

A few, with imagination, will say hereafter:

"1931 was the beginning of my success."

May you be one of them. Success is not difficult, and it is much more pleasant than failure.

SOMETIMES, WHEN things seem to go wrong, it is a comfort to be reminded that nothing matters very much. If the earth fell toward the sun it would melt like a flake of snow falling on a red-hot stove, long before it could reach the sun.

And if, in turn, our gigantic sun, a million times as big as the earth, fell toward some of the really big suns in space, it, also, would melt before it could reach that sun's surface.

PROF. SHAPLEY, with his forehead high and his ears low down, the best arrangement, tells you that Harvard Observatory has found and measured "about 18,000 new galaxies, each an island universe."

AN ISLAND universe contains millions of suns. One little group, called the "large Megellanic," has 200,000 suns, every one 150 times brighter than our sun, and 2,000 suns that are 10,000 times as bright as ours.

Under such circumstances will you please tell us what difference it makes whether Anaconda Copper goes up or down?

IT SAYS in Ecclesiastes:

"A fool also is full of words: a man cannot tell what shall be."

Nevertheless, men of wisdom tell us that better conditions have started already.

Mr. Lamont, secretary of commerce, sees a distinct upturn in business, and, also important, the conductor of one of the busiest Central Railroad of New Jersey trains says:

"I know times are getting better. I can see it in the faces of passengers, business men that have traveled with me for years."

NEW YORK newspapers report "a joyous New Year's Eve" with five resorts raided.

Mr. Arthur ("Bugs") Baer, philosopher and an absolute teetotaler, expresses humorously the thought of many Americans living under prohibition as follows:

"We're going to start the New Year right by wondering how we got home last night. The last thing we remember was seeing a constellation of policemen's buttons."

ONE WRITER describes Wall Street brokers as celebrating the death of 1930 "with a pensive sadness." A broker "pensively sad" would be worth seeing.

Sad or glad, brokers are advised not to sell their seats, as they have done recently, far below value. Stock prices may rise and fall, but "one-eighth of 1 per cent" goes on forever.

Seats will go above $500,000 each, and in the next really great boom they will go to $1,000,000, in spite of their being watered 40 per cent, in accordance with Wall Street custom.

S. Parker Gilbert, formerly in charge of reparation payments, enters the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., making 19 members in the firm.

"One interested in business and profits, landing in the J. P. Morgan firm, is like Sinbad the Sailor, landing in the Valley of Diamonds. To such a J. P. Morgan partner, you may apply Stevenson's lines:

"Home is the sailor, home from the sea.
And the hunter home from the hill."

No more worry.

UNCLE SAM begins the New Year up to his neck in wheat. Mr. Legge, head of the Farm Board, would forbid short sales, and even approve closing up the Board of Trade, under some conditions.

Laws cannot stop short selling, as Mr. Legge well knows, any more than they can stop whisky buying. And every grain man knows that the government, sooner or later, must sell its grain accumulation.

OUR PROBLEMS are trifling compared with those of Great Britain. A Labor government, that was to find employment for all, has twice as many idle men on its hands as when it started, and for nine months of the fiscal year just ended has a deficit of $903,000,000 — $53,000,000 more than a year ago.

The marvelous thing is that Great Britain goes placidly along, with organized labor in charge of government. What would be said here, what would be the shrieking if union labor were suddenly put in charge of the United States?

THE JAPANESE prime minister, Hamaguchi, seriously wounded by an assassin's bullet, is improving. On the New Year, although very ill, he insisted on getting up to shave.

Then, dressed in his ceremonial kimono, standing, in spite of his illness, and facing in the direction of the imperial palace, he made a deep bow, as a sign of respect to the emperor.

Japan is modern in science, energy and efficiency, but old-fashioned in respect for tradition.

WALTER DURANTY, conservative correspondent, writing from Moscow, says Russia's experiment has had a success-

BLAST FIRES MONESSEN BLOCK

Explosion Starts Flames In Fruit Store; Leaking Gas Line Believed Cause

By AL GOUGH,
Staff Correspondent.

MONESSEN, Pa., Jan. 2.—More than a score of people were blown from their beds, windows a mile away were shattered and damage estimated at $200,000 to $250,000 resulted from an explosion in the heart of the business district early today.

Firemen from Donora and Charleroi aided Monessen firemen in battling the flames, which razed several buildings and damaged several others.

The blast occurred in the fruit store of Sam Steinman, on the first floor of the Vernecent Building, at 641 Donner avenue, police said. The front of the place was blown out. The cause of the blast is undetermined. Police were inclined to the belief that leaking gas was responsible.

FIRE SPREADS

Fire, which followed a few seconds later, spread to nearby buildings, and when firemen arrived had eaten its way into a two-story stucco building at 455-459 Donner avenue, occupied on the first floor by Harry's Recreation Parlor, and on the second by the apartments of Fred Menizel, real estate operator, and Isadore Pavalovich, a tailor, his wife and their two children, one an infant.

A few minutes before the blast Mrs. Pavalovich had been awakened by the infant's cries, and had taken it from its crib into bed with her. When the blast came a large picture was hurled from the wall into the crib.

The fire then swept into a three-story building occupied on the first two floors by the Olympic theater, and on the third by lodge rooms, and into a one-story

Hoover Encomium Project Abandoned

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—A plan of a magazine to publish in newspapers throughout the nation an open letter praising President Hoover's administration has been abandoned because of "unfavorable and untimely publicity," the editors announced today.

Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, assailed the project on the Senate floor several weeks ago. The open letter was to have been an advertisement paid for by persons who were asked to underwrite not more than $100 apiece of the expense.

Couzens Takes Us for Ride on U. and I. Railroad

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

All aboard for the Unethical and Indiscreet Railroad.

New trunk line of chatter started by Senator Couzens.

Mr. Couzens whistled for a big crossing that time.

President Hoover wants to start the New Year right by merging four railroads.

And that's what Senator Couzens calls unethical and indiscreet.

Now, senator, the holiday merrymaking is over. Take off that paper hat.

When you are talking about the President it's a national hookup. You can't say such things about our first executive so early in the year.

We thought we were all going to be pals this year but Senator Couzens seems to want another romp.

Mr. Hoover hasn't answered the dignified senator yet. But

REBELS SEIZE PANAMA

By J. A. RYAN,
International News Service.

COLON, Panama, Jan. 2.—An American was killed and 15 others reported slain today when a group of young revolutionaries, headed by Gen. Manuel Quintero, overthrew the government of the Republic of Panama, imprisoning President Florencio Arosemena and Vice President T. Gabriel Duque and setting up a provisional insurrectionary junta.

Many persons were reported injured in street fighting. Hartwell E. Ayers, former American newspaper editor of Atlanta, Ga., whose home is said to be in Alabama, suffered bullet wounds in his stomach and throat from which he died this afternoon.

The revolutionary forces were composed of members of the "Accion Communal," a radical political organization. Coatless and wearing broad-brimmed hats, they invaded the presidential palace after disarming the police and driving them from the streets.

American troops were guarding the border between native Panama and the Canal Zone, as well as the United States legation in Panama City. No attempt at intervention has been made.

Stock Exchange Officials Preparing to Balk 'Numbers' Gamblers

While Pittsburgh take-a-chance folk wrinkled their foreheads over the New York Stock Exchange daily sale total as a basis for the "numbers" racket, indications were that their study would be for naught—because exchange officials would censor the figure.

In doing this the Stock Exchange would follow the lead of the New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago Clearing Houses.

Ashbel Greene, secretary of the New York Stock Exchange, today told the Sun-Telegraph that the exchange would not tolerate the use of the daily sales totals as a basis for a lottery.

Only the million and hundred thousand figures, he explained, are necessary or useful to brokers. He said:

"It is certainly within our province to publish all but these two figures in ciphers. We probably would not abolish the whole number, however.

"There is no possible way for crooks to change the correct total. We have not yet given the matter our official attention."

Meanwhile, pool operators reported first day's play on the new "number" to be low. The people are waiting to investigate the new system, it is said, and to see "tip

SLATE EINSTEIN AS CHAIRMAN

Political circles buzzed today today with the report that State Senator Morris Einstein was to be made chairman of the Allegheny County delegation of the General Assembly. The caucus is scheduled for 8 p. m. tonight in the Bar Association rooms, City-County Building.

The selection of Einstein to head the Allegheny County delegation in the lower House would establish a precedent.

The senator from the Forty-second District is the dean of county members of both houses. E. B. Goehring, oldest member of the lower House was said to have been slated for the position, but at the last minute a switch to Einstein was made.

C. J. Goodnough, candidate for speaker of the House, will probably be indorsed.

The six senators from Allegheny County will attend the caucus as spectators. They are always invited, but the senatorial caucus will not be held until Monday night at Harrisburg, when the battle for president pro-tempore of the Senate will be fought out.

Salus Says Pinchot Bolted In Supporting Norris

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—The Republican irregularity of Augustus F. Diax, Jr., candidate for re-election as president pro tem. of the State Senate, in supporting a Democrat for governor, Senator Samuel W. Salus declared today, is no graver than Gov.-elect Gifford Pinchot's supporting U. S. Senator George W. Norris, who backed a Democratic nominee for President.

Senator Norris, Nebraska Republican, is the center of the controversy now raging in Washington as a result of revelations that Robert H. Lucas, chairman of the executive committee of the Republican National Committee, used G. O. P. funds in a fruitless effort to defeat Norris and elect his Democratic opponent.

Senator Salus drew his comparison in the contest between Daix and William D. Mansfield, McKeesport, candidate of the Pinchot forces for president pro tem. The Philadelphia organization "war board" member last week sent a letter to Mansfield urging him to withdraw and support Daix, and the Allegheny County member in reply called upon the local group to show "clean hands."

8 MARINES, ONE PENNSYLVANIAN, SLAIN IN NICARAGUA

LITTLE BAND FIGHTS TO FINISH

...rican Patrol Falls Into ...ebel Trap, Hopelessly ...outnumbered by Enemy

International News Service.

...ANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 2.—Outlaw bullets in the jungles of northern Nicaragua snapped short the lives of eight United States marines Wednesday and inflicted serious wounds on two other enlisted men of the same patrol who were brought here by airplane today.

The slain Marines, including Pfc. Joseph Alfred Hasbrouck, whose father, John A. Hasbrouck, lives at 1430 Bovie street, North Side, Pittsburgh.

The casualties, the heaviest sustained by the Leatherneck since New Year's day, 1928, were inflicted by lurking attackers in the wilderness of Ananapaga, between Ocotal and Ocali, where followers of Insurgent Augusto Sandino were lately reported to have been operating again.

FOUGHT TO LAST

Meagre reports filtering back to Marine barracks here said that although the ambushed patrol was badly outnumbered and faced an enemy almost completely hidden by jungle growth, it stood "to the last man" and returned the bandit fire until the shot. As far as could be ascertained, between 12 and 20 of the attackers were either killed or wounded.

Fifty Marines were sent in pursuit of the ambushing party.

BLAST WRECKS BUILDINGS

WINDOWS SHATTERED

Every window in a three-story building on the opposite side of the street, occupied on the first floor by the La Forte music store and half a dozen apartments, and the Crow building, was broken.

Adjoining the Steinman fruit store were two other places of business, a jewelry store and a women's dress shop. Above the shops were the living quarters of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Vernecemi and their 16-year-old son Everett. Husband and wife were attending a New Years party when the blast occurred, and Everett, who returned home about an hour before, was unable to get into the building. The front door was locked and he went to a nearby restaurant to await his parents' return.

MOTHER COLLAPSES

They returned to find their home a mass of flames, and Mrs. Vernecemi, unaware of her son's escape, collapsed. Her son was at her side in the home of neighbors when she was revived.

Scores of families residing in the district were forced to take refuge in the homes of friends and neighbors outside the fire zone, windows and doors in their homes having been blown out in the explosion.

Fire Chief William Laird estimated the damage.

Mayor Carl Woodward and Chief of Police John W. Lukasich were early on the scene and began an investigation into the cause of the blast.

200 BURMESE SLAIN IN ROUT

LONDON, Jan. 2.—(INS.)—Two hundred Burmese rebels were killed today when 1,000 British troops carried out a vigorous attack against their jungle stronghold in the Tharawaddy section of Upper Burma and shattered all resistance, according to Exchange Telegraph dispatches from Rangoon.

The rebel savages, who have held the government forces at bay for several days, fled to their mountain fastnesses after abandoning a series of well planned entrenchments.

Seventeen officers were found among the rebel dead.

GIRL IN COLOGNE ON CHINA FLIGHT

COLOGNE, Germany, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Miss Amy Johnson, British girl flier on a flight to Peiping, China, landed here this afternoon from Liege, Belgium. She plans to fly to Berlin tomorrow.

MOSCOW, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Amy Johnson's solo flight across Russia to Peiping is arousing little interest, but considerable disapproval here. The Soviet government has extended permission for passage over the country, but aviation officials say she has picked the wrong time of year for so difficult a flight.

Intense cold and deep snow in Siberia will make the journey hazardous, they pointed out, but apparently there will be no official move to halt the flight if the British girl still wants to continue after experiencing the bitter winter in Moscow.

SUCCESS SEEN FOR HOOVER'S RAIL PLAN

Couzens' Opposition Not Expected to Interfere With Commission Action

By EDWARD L. RODDAN, Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—President Hoover's plan of consolidating Eastern railroads into four great systems appeared today to have excellent prospects of approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission, despite an opposition in Congress.

Close study of the merger proposal showed that it follows in many details the five-system plan advocated by the Interstate Commerce Commission itself last year.

While the new plan has yet to be placed formally before the commission, heads of railroads involved have revealed that this will be done without delay.

MAY BE POLITICAL ISSUE

Meanwhile, President Hoover's advocacy of the merger threatened to provoke a major political issue which may thrust itself along with the power issue into the 1932 presidential campaign. Already it has caused a break in Republican ranks.

The Chief Executive has been criticized sharply by Senator Couzens for announcing his approval of the plan in advance of consideration by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and has been warmly defended by Senator Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Couzens takes the view that the consolidations are more in the interest of the stockholders than they are in the public interest.

RAIL CHIEFS CONFER

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Heads of the four eastern trunk line railroads who reached an agreement last week on the major points of a consolidation plan were in conference here again today.

There was no announcement as to the subject of the discussion, but it was believed that ratification of the agreement's terms, which have not been made public officially, was being considered. It is known that the executives desire to get their proposals before the Interstate Commerce Commission as soon as possible, perhaps by the end of this month.

Several details, including the price the Van Sweringens will pay the Pennsylvania for the latter's interest in the Lehigh Valley and the rental to be paid by the Pennsylvania for trackage rights over the Nickel Plate, between Buffalo and Chicago, remained to be settled when the agreement was announced on Tuesday.

HYATT SECRET BRIDEGROOM

By JESS CARVER.

Charley Hyatt, who made basketball history during four brilliant years at Pitt, and who now is standing the Pacific Coast on its ear with a continuation of the stellar play that carried him to the top of the intercollegiate heap, has stolen a march on the folks.

Chipper Charley was secretly married nearly a year ago to Miss Jane Gwynn, a childhood sweetheart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Gwynn, of Connellsville.

Hyatt and Miss Gwynn were married on April 25 at Berkeley Springs, W. Va.

Returning to Pittsburgh after a brief honeymoon, Hyatt went back to his studies at Pitt, and his bride returned to her duties in the offices of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company, where she is a secretary.

The Hyatts planned to announce their marriage when Hyatt left for California, where he had signed to play basketball with the Los Angeles A. C. They changed their minds, however, but yesterday, before departing to join her famous husband, Mrs. Hyatt, through a mutual friend, gave the story to this correspondent.

The couple met first while Hyatt was starring at Uniontown High School. Mrs. Hyatt is 22. Her husband is 23.

SENATE QUIZ ON RELIEF TO OPEN

Monday Set for Start of Inquiry; Col. Woods and Hyde Will Be Heard

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The Senate's formal inquiry into national unemployment, the extent of state relief and the adequacy of federal relief will get under way Monday, it was announced today by Senator Jones (Rep.), of Washington, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The inquiry, authorized by the LaFollette resolution, will be held to determine whether national unemployment can be relieved by state agencies plus the two bills sponsored by President Hoover, and enacted before the Christmas recess.

These measures appropriated $116,000,000 to speed federal public works, and authorized a $45,000,000 fund for loans to farmers in drought-stricken states.

All the government's authorities on unemployment and agricultural distress will be called before the committee. Secretary of Agriculture Hyde will be the first witness, appearing Monday in connection with the $45,000,000 farm loan bill. John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, a representative of Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of Army engineers, and Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, will be heard Tuesday, and Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the President's employment commission, will testify Wednesday.

The Senate specifically ordered the calling of these witnesses. It requested Woods be asked concerning the extent of unemployment, the relief measures initiated by different states and for recomendations on the expansion of public works during the year.

JOSEPH ROTONDO, 19 NATALI ROTONDO, 16

In Pittsburgh only 10 days after a trip from Italy, these youths through an interpreter told of the trolley's sudden, terrific crash as they slept . . . "thought it was an earthquake and jumped down the steps."

car in half with torches when the car took fire. Firemen extinguished the flames.

There was one passenger on the car. Paul W. Wasser, 32, of 5621 Wilkins avenue. He was treated for a wrenched back and cuts on the face at Mercy Hospital. He said:

"I got on the car at Craft avenue barn. I was tired and dozing. I don't know what happened except that I was thrown, it seemed, from one end of the car to the other. How did the motorman make out? . . . See if you can find a shoe and hat I lost."

The other injured were John Rotondo, his wife, four children and his father.

Mrs. Rotondo, 28, who is an expectant mother, two of the children, Paul, 9, and Natalie, 14 months, and her father-in-law, Paul Rotondo, 64, were kept in the hospital, reported suffering bruises and shock. At noon the mother and children were discharged.

THREE ESCAPE

John Rotondo and the other two children, Pauline, 6, and Constance, 8, escaped with bruises.

Rotondo's brothers, Joseph, 19 and Natali, 16, who were sleeping on the second floor with their father, Paul, escaped injury.

These three had come to Pittsburgh from Italy the day before Christmas. They were sleeping on the second floor. Through an interpreter Joseph tersely described his feelings:

"I thought is was an earthquake, I jumped down the steps."

A tenth person hurt was Mrs. Rotondo's mother, Mrs. Natalia Villa, of 3313 Liberty avenue, who hearing the crash rushed to the scene of the accident and was bruised, probably while walking through a pile of debris.

It was a one-man street car.

Foley, the motorman, who lives at 3532 Frazier street, suffered a probable fractured skull and lacerations. His critical condition prevented him from explaining how the car jumped the tracks.

Fortunately, the car struck the wall at a sharp angle and missed the beds in which the Rotondo family slept by a few feet. Windows of the car itself were shattered and its side was bent.

CARS DELAYED

The traffic jam and the ripping of overhead wires caused the street car delay which piled up all cars affected by the Liberty avenue routes.

Thousands of workers were late because of the delay.

In her bed in the West Penn Hospital, Mrs. Rotondo described the crash:

"We were sleeping in the front room, my husband and the four children and I. Paul and Natalie were in bed with their father and me. Pauline and and Constance were sleeping on a daybed in our room.

"I heard an awful noise. The plaster from the ceiling fell down on our bed and the children screamed. That awakened me and the room seemed to be all lit up. I think it was the light from the street car. I could just see the end of the car. After that I don't remember very much, only that my husband told me to be very careful and then he took me up and carried me out into the street and went back and got the children out and then took them all to my mother's."

NAME KIDNAPER OF BUSCH HEIR

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 2.—(INS.)—The kidnaper of Adolphus Busch Orthwein, 12, considered one of the wealthiest children in the Middle West, was the son of a St. Louis Negro real estate dealer, Harry Troll, attorney for Percy J. Orthwein, the boy's father, told reporters today.

Adolphus

Following Troll's statement police immediately hurried to the home of the real estate dealer in order to question him in connection with the kidnaping.

Troll told reporters that the wealthy Orthwein youth was returned to his parents without any ransom changing hands, the father of the alleged kidnaper saying to Orthwein, the boy's father:

"I want to return your boy."

Troll's statement to the reporters broke the silence of the Busch family who have steadfastly refused to make any explanation concerning their knowledge of the kidnaping since the youth was returned to his grandfather's palatial home, Grant's Farm, yesterday.

Coolidge Expects Rail Deal to Provide Jobs

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 2.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

Even when we are most certain that we are making no progress something always is occurring that results in an important advance in human welfare. When we were contemplating a period of economic stagnation the announcement comes of a tentative agreement for establishing four eastern trunkline railroad systems with a combined trackage of about 55,000 miles. This is nearly one-fourth of the railroad mileage in the United States and represents over $4,000,000,000.

Calvin Coolidge

It has taken 10 years of continual effort to reach this agreement. Perhaps it could not have been done when the roads felt extremely prosperous and independent. The competition of pipe lines, motor vehicles and airplanes combined with present business conditions probably had their effect.

The general object of consolidations is better service. Financially strong units with well diversified business will simplify the problem of uniform rates and regulations. Different parts of the country can have more nearly the same treatment. If the plan is finally adopted, large amounts of business now held in abevance by the great key industry of transportation will begin to be transacted, it will be a great factor in giving permanent portitable employment.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

STEEL OUTPUT SPEEDED

Rolling mill schedules in virtually all of the Pittsburgh steel mills have been increased with the beginning of the new year. A better inquiry is reported and a price increase of $1 a ton on bars, plates and sheets is holding firm.

A considerable part of the manufacturing now going on is to fill orders which were taken at the old prices. In the period of several weeks before the increase went into effect, a number of good-sized orders were placed.

The increased business will mean more work and higher average pay for employes of the steel companies, many of whom have been on part time. The Pittsburgh district has succeeded in holding its operations higher than other steel districts of the country.

The pressure gradient moved very rapidly during the past several days, which resulted in rapid changes in weather. A marked high pressure area covers the East and Southeast this morning, with the highest barometer reported over Florida. Highest temperatures are reported from the Southern States, where the temperature was eight degrees below zero. Snow is reported this morning, the weather over the West remaining in mid-winter temperatures, but with little cloudiness and precipitation except over the Pacific Coast states. Temperature will rise over this section today, and not severely cold weather will follow over the week-end.

JOFFRE IN COMA AS DEATH NEARS

PARIS, Jan. 2.—(INS.)—Marshal Joffre of France, breathing fairly regularly as if in the deepest sleep was reported unchanged today after more than 20 hours of continued unconsciousness.

According to those who have watched the old soldier now within 10 days of his seventy-ninth birthday, he has moved or stirred only rarely since sinking into the comatose state. That and the beating of his heart remained the only signs of life.

Conflicting reports regarding Joffre's condition were given out throughout New Year's Day by persons who were allowed at the bedside of the Marne hero for a few moments.

In the middle of the day, a broadcast from the Eiffel Tower radio station announced the marshal's death, but this was later denied.

EINSTEIN JOINS SCIENTISTS

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Dr. Albert Einstein today joined the men studying the behavior of a universe, to the structure of which they say his relativity theory appears to offer a clue.

These men, earnest workers of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, have the world's largest telescope, a 100-inch reflecting mirror—at Mount Wilson.

This observatory, an attraction for the master mathematician and physicist is investigating the universe studying its parts, its structure and its behavior. Since no one institution can hope to cover the whole of the subject, Mount Wilson having the world's largest telescope devotes most of its time to the remote regions.

The lottery figure which all Pittsburgh pools have agreed to use will be composed of the ten-thousand, thousand and hundred columns in the daily total of shares sold on the New York Stock Exchange. Printed announcements distributed over the city today said:

"All books will operate on figures composed of the New York Daily Stock Final Total Sales of the current day, which may read as follows:

Total sales 2,172,360.

"723 being declared the winning number, payable at 3 p. m. the following day. All slips must be in at or before 10 a. m."

Meanwhile persons who played on the United States Treasury balance speculated today on what action bookies would take who announced and accepted play on the Treasury statement.

It was learned that a card announcing the system gave as an example a balance of $692,729,346.04. The third, sixth and ninth figure from the right were in large type as the winning number, 296. Taking this as a "bunch," many are believed to have played 296, which was the winning number today according to the report for December 30, giving a balance of $312,759,386.10.

Return of money played on the grounds that a switch had been made to the stock exchange figures was forecast.

Prince Who Located Tomb Of King Tut Works Here

The man who designated the spot where the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen was unearthed, Prince Roman Orbeliani, today is unassumingly intent on cataloging more than 1,500 Egyptian stone weapons and implements in the basement of Carnegie Institute that he brought here after 10 years in Egypt.

The collection numbers among its specimens of the earliest handiwork of man stones estimated at 1,000,000 years old. It has been purchased by the museum and is considered the largest and most complete in the country.

Prince Orbeliani, a native of the Russian province of Georgia, was born in St. Petersburg, Russia. He was educated in England. During the World War, which brought his explorations to a close, he was taken prisoner by the Turks and held at Angora for three years. His collection had been shipped from Egypt to Hamburg, Germany, but before he could send it to its final destination, the Germans seized the specimens. Two years of effort were necessary to recover the collection.

TRAIN WRECKS AUTO

CHICAGO, Jan. 2 (AP)—A baby is the sole survivor of 6 persons, members of a family, who crowded into an automobile for a holiday auto ride last night. The others were fatally killed when the Indiana Limited of the Grand Trunk railway crashed into them at a grade crossing in suburban Hammond, Ind.

The automobile was traveling on a newly opened road in One Hundred and Forty-sixth street and came to the crossing which did not as yet have a watchman or warning signals.

The wreckage was carried 500 feet and the bodies strewn over the right of way. The baby apparently had been thrown clear of the car by its mother, who authorities believe, saw the crash was inevitable.

The dead include Mathusalen Cooper, 41, of Elmhurst, Ill., his wife, Roma, 37, two children, Calvin, 9, and Marion, 5; Vilborg Frank Nowak, 37, of Chicago, his wife, Mary, 35, three children, Lorraine, Casimir, 8, Lorraine Margaret Casimir, four months old, was the baby found unhurt beside the crossing.

B. & O. TO SPEND 35 MILLIONS

BALTIMORE, Jan. 2 (AP)—Improvements planned by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in 1931, with a total approximating $35,000,000, nearly double the amount spent last year, it was announced today.

The largest single expenditure contemplated is $4,000,000 for new equipment, the remainder being dedicated to additions and improvements throughout the system.

The 1930 expenditure for these purposes was $18,000,000. An automatic train control system installed between Philadelphia and Washington cost $412,000.

Style and dependability characterize these two fine cars. You note the modern mode, the richness of finish and the most careful attention to details in these achievements by Oakland, Fisher and General Motors.

New beauty is created by long, low lines extending from the handsome "V" radiator and in-built chromium screen to the massive single-bar bumper at the rear. New comfort and riding ease are attained by balanced design, by luxurious interiors upholstered in whipcord and mohair, and by rubber cushioning at more than 40 chassis points. And with this beauty and luxury comes a performance satisfying to the most exacting motorist. Throughout—in appearance, in performance, in quality, in value—these new Oakland and Pontiac cars reflect a uniform and intrinsic excellence. They are two fine cars.

OAKLAND'S 85 h. p. V-Eight motor, inherently smooth and quiet, delivers brilliant, rugged power.

SYNCRO-MESH—New Syncro-Mesh transmission makes shifting easy at any speed, up or down.

BODIES BY FISHER—Styled by Fisher, each of the six Oakland body types is distinguished by its smart appearance, generous comfort and its rich, attractive interior with mohair and whipcord upholstery.

LONG WHEELBASE—Wheelbase is lengthened, permitting large, spacious bodies, added ease and comfort.

BODIES BY FISHER—Six body types with Fisher beauty and craftsmanship. Mohair and whipcord upholstery; non-glare windshield; deep, luxurious cushions; adjustable driver's seat; sizable, livable interiors.

LARGE BRAKES—New mechanical, four-wheel brakes are one-fifth larger, easy and sure to operate.

INLOX-FLOATED—New Inlox rubber spring shackle bushings reduce road shocks and eliminate twelve lubrication points.

WEATHERTIGHT COWL—Cowl and narrow windshield posts are formed in one unit, making strong, tight construction.

6 PLANES SEEK LOST FLIER

ROSEBURG, Ore., Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Fliers and mountaineers joined forces here today to search Douglas County for J. Russell Cunningham, of Seattle, missing Pacific Air Transport pilot.

Cunningham has not been heard from since early yesterday when he radioed:

"Lost in sleet and fog. Will have to land."

En route from Medford to Seattle, he said he believed he was over Canyonville. His plane carried neither mail nor passengers.

Six planes swept into Southern Oregon at Medford last night. Four more planes were expected to join them there today.

Reports here said a plane had been heard in the vicinity of Diamond Lake yesterday. If Cunningham flew as far East as Diamond Lake he may have landed safely in the more open country there, aviators said. It was held doubtful he could have made a successful landing near Canyonville.

2 MEN STRUCK BY CARS, DIE

Two men were killed, one when struck by a street car in Springdale, the other when hit by a train at Hawkins Station last night, according to the coroner's report.

Arthur Denny, 40, of 618 Sixth avenue, Tarentum, was killed when struck by a street car near Boquet stop, in Springdale. He was walking in the road, and was decapitated by the car, the coroner's office reported. The car was said to have been operated by Harry McMasters.

Struck by a train of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Hawkins Station, yesterday, Sigmond Probst, 45, of 333 Omega street, suffered injuries which caused his death several hours later in Columbia Hospital. Probst walked from behind one train and stepped into the path of another, deputy coroners reported.

GIRL'S SLAYING BAFFLES POLICE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Why pretty Beulah Limerick, 19, was shot to death and by whom still baffled Washington police today, two days after an undertaker accidentally discovered a hidden bullet hole at the back of her head.

Authorities had turned loose a score of persons questioned since the girl was found dead Wednesday, but they held her brother, Vernon Limerick, and Richard Reed, who lived at their house, and Edward Paddy, who had been her escort at a dance Tuesday night.

A "jealous suitor" perhaps killed her, police thought, as they scanned a list of her intimate friends for clues. They studied, too, a diary which contained, they said, many frank references to a number of her boy friends.

FLAMES WRECK NEWSPAPER

BALTIMORE, Jan. 2.—(INS.)—The Baltimore Post, made homeless by a fire which wrecked its five-story building last night, and caused the death of one of its employes, appeared on the streets as usual today, printed in the plant of the A. S. Abell Company, which publishes the Sun and the Evening Sun.

Firemen attributed the fire, which brought injury to six persons, to an explosion in the photographic rooms on the second floor.

The employe who met death was Joseph R. Douglass, linotype operator, on the third floor. He leaped three floors, fracturing his skull.

In speaking of the Alabama football team now in the post-season game, Will Rogers recalled the time in 1925, when the Crimson Tide played in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena with the University of Washington as the favorite to beat them.

"Well," sighed Will, "when the game was over everybody in the stands came out with a Southern accent even Nick the Greek, who said teching, 'You all must come over.'"

So far Gubbins is still looking. Of course, there are many Spanish-speaking Chinamen in Mexico. But the cost of bringing them to Hollywood is prohibitive, about 20 years in the federal penitentiary.

STAGE ATTRACTIONS COMING NEXT WEEK

Next Monday, "With the Line," a drama by Josephine Victor Boyd, adapted from the German by Fritz Stein, will open as the attraction in the Nixon. Lillian Foster, an American actress who gained considerable fame in London in the play called "Conscience," is the featured player.

"I wouldn't operate you for the world," says Howard Thurston, magician. But you know he would, and invariably he does. He comes to the Shubert-Alvin next Monday night.

Eugene O'Brien and Leslie Lane, who will play the leading roles in George Sharp's presentation of "Hell Is Paved" in the Pitt next week, recently closed an engagement in a New York production. Mr. O'Brien will be remembered for his appearances on the screen with Norma Talmadge and other stars.

Uncommon Sense

When "Private Lives," by and with Noel Coward, opens in Manhattan next month the indications are that it will be a sure-fire hit. In London where it will soon close after its twelfth week, the libraries (ticket agencies) profited $6,000 weekly on the production. They are sick over Coward's desertion, too.

Mr. Coward, it appears, simply won't appear in any show over a dozen weeks. He will close "Private Lives" after its twelfth week here, too. He must have relaxation, he says, and time to prepare other plays.

As the author of it he will receive 10 per cent of the royalties. As the star he draws 10 per cent of the gross and then he takes one-third of the profits as manager. There are four in the cast.

Coward, they will tell you, closes his plays after the twelfth week for another reason, however. He runs his stuff at the sophisticate.

"After you've played 12 weeks," he once said, "all the worth-while and the intelligent have seen your show. I would bore the others."

SECRET RECORD BACKS POWER CHARGES

Documents Support Senate Accusation of Attempt To Balk Federal Control

By M. L. RAMSAY,
United Service

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Secret records were disclosed today supporting the charge of Senate insurgents that the removal of two Federal Power Commission officials is an attempt to throttle all regulation of the power companies.

These records, it was learned, will be used by leaders in building their case against Chairman George Otis Smith and Commissioners Garland and Draper, whose confirmation as power commissioners they hope to revoke.

A sensational protest against the power trust's earlier maneuvers to hamstring the commission, made by former Executive Secretary O. C. Merrill, has been brought to light. This protest is in the commission's files but was not disclosed to senatorial investigators last winter.

It shows that:

The power interests fought savagely against Merrill and the successive power commissions to scrap all official regulations that were devised, and substitute an administrative plan giving them public power sites on their own terms.

Their attack on the accounting system of William V. King, removed as chief accountant by the new commission, was part and parcel of this greater fight.

Merrill himself branded at least part of the attack on King's system as in reality an assault upon the law and the commission's regulations.

He found evidence of a masked effort to break down honest accounting by state as well as federal agencies, through attempted changes in King's system.

Merrill left the commission in 1929 to become secretary of the American section of the World Power Conference, financed by the power interests.

TACTICS FOUGHT

His protest against the power companies' tactics was written after the commission had twice ruled against the companies' contentions, and four formal hearings had been held, with innumerable informal conferences.

He said in part:

"It is apparent that the attack on the commission's regulations is not due to their direct effect on licensees. In fact, no one who would be directly affected has ever appeared before the commission or its staff.

"The attack on the regulations is part of a general campaign against accounting for depreciation, and the purpose of the attack is to get the commission to use its influence against, instead of in support, the practices now being followed by the other federal and state commissions.

"Barring matters of minor detail, criticism of the accounting system is not criticism of the accounting system as such, but criticism of the act and of the regulations upon which the system is based.

PACT REPUDIATED

"The agreement reached with representatives of the Association (National Electric Light Association) in May has been repudiated and the questions reopened through the influence of Eastern representatives of the association who are not now and never will be licensees of the commission.

"The dominating influence appears to be exerted by the Consolidated Gas Company, of New York."

The Consolidated Company was ... in the midst of a New York ... fight to boost the value of ... utility property, upon which ... consumers would be compelled to ... rates. It was proposed to ... nate all depreciation, and ... old or worn-out property as ... h it were new.

...imately the Federal Commis... overrode the power industry ...retained King's depreciation ...nting. But it has never been ...ally enforced.

RADIO PROGRAMS TONIGHT

WE NOW PRESENT
By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Radio Editor

William S. Paley, Columbia's boy president, offers the first program by the newly formed Columbia Concerts Corporation through WJAS at 10 o'clock tonight. Sophia Braslau, contralto; Florence Easton, soprano; Nelson Eddy, baritone, and Ernest Hutcheson pianist, are the stars. The world's best talent has been made available to radio through this corporation merger of seven concert bureaus. Future programs are to be presented on Wednesday night at 10:30.

Twenty-one guns for Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of NBC, for the excellent relay from Rome, Italy, yesterday—really the highlight of the New Year's schedule.

All the vibrating personality of "Il Duce" could be felt in Mussolini's speech. His views on world peace were gratifying.

We honestly believe radio can accomplish more for world peace than any round table yet devised.

* * *

Something of Mussolini's fine character was revealed in the type of American literature he mentioned. Oliver Wendell Holmes and Edgar Allan Poe seem to be his favorite poets. Topping the list of other authors was the beloved Samuel Clemens.

The Loudspeaker -:- By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. Despite the disclosure of Robert L. Ripley that the English once emptied their mugs to the strains of the "Star-Spangled Banner" and that the French once lifted their glasses to the tune of America, there is no agitation among the Volsteaders for another amendment, which would abolish these patriotic anthems.

Perhaps it is because the brethren have nothing to offer in place of these songs as a call to national exultation. Well, they might choose Gershwin's tangy march, "Strike Up the Band." There is also available Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever." And, of course, there is the most thrilling of all American tunes, "Dixie."

* * *

But the brethren can't be as sure of Ripley. They can't be sure that he has not also traced the origins of these types to one long-forgotten tune, pan-American in drama, locking and clicking.

* * *

Sports assumed a more conspicuous place on the radio during 1930. Football, baseball, racing, boxing, rowing, golf, track meets—all were brought to the microphones with an attention to detail and excitement which prove that the broadcasters were alert to their enormous hold on the American public. To these ears the following were the best sports broadcasts of the year:

The Travers Stakes at Saratoga, described by Clem McCarthy, in which Jim Dandy, 100 to 1 shot, beat Gallant Fox.

The first world series game at St. Louis.

The Notre Dame-Southern California football game.

The Kentucky Derby, in which Lord Derby, himself, spoke to American racing fans.

The Harvard-Army football game.

The Yale-Princeton football game in which the surprising doggedness of Princeton's attack furnished continuous suspense.

The Sharkey-Schmeling bout, in spite of its unsatisfactory ending.

The Chocolate-Battalino bout.

The finals of the National Open at Interlachen and the subsequent greeting by leading golf pros.

The rebroadcast of the British Derby at Epsom Downs.

Musically, radio broadcasting made astonishing progress during the past year. Symphony orchestras representing the larger American cities were heard. Famous operatic and concert artists reached the microphone. Special programs from the Metropolitan Opera House, the Manhattan Opera House, the Mormon Tabernacle Choir and the Hall of Music and Poetry were heard.

Alice, Legge Talk Same Language, But Not Much

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Chairman Legge of the Farm Board doesn't go out much in Washington society simply because he doesn't want to. So he had never met Alice Roosevelt Longworth until yesterday.

Turning to a friend at the White House reception Mrs. Longworth said:

"I want you to introduce me to Mr. Legge. You see, we talk the same language."

They were introduced and both said the same thing: It was:

"How do you do?"

HOPE TO LOWER TRAFFIC TOLL

The hope that a continued decrease in adult traffic fatalities will be seen in 1931 was expressed today by George E. Clarkson, chairman of the accident prevention section of the Better Traffic Committee. The decrease in child traffic fatalities shown in 1930 is expected to be continued this year, Clarkson said.

Hope for the new year is seen in the continued success of education measures in reducing the child traffic toll from 39 in 1929 to 25 in 1930. The reduction was made in spite of a 10 per cent increase in traffic.

Coughs Cost Him PLENTY

"I used to be a chronic sufferer from colds and coughs. Every winter I was 'out' a number of days—away from work with a cough. Last winter, when the first sniffle of the season came along, I got a bottle of Smith Brothers' Cough Syrup. It stopped my cough right at the beginning. And—thanks to the syrup—I've kept healthy ever since." J. Hagan, Syracuse, N. Y.

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

We wish somebody would accuse the natives of this district of lack of inventive power for we're in a splendid position to deny the charge. We have just seen a list of the recent patents issued to our neighbors and we're in a mental fog; we don't know what the inventions are, in most cases.

William Pfarr

Joseph Van Ackeren, for instance, has a retort charging apparatus. Joseph Becker seems to have gone him one better, although we're just guessing, by supplying a coke retort with quenching device. Albert J. Myers excites our imagination by inventing a rotary grizzly but we can readily understand Harry G. Traver's, which is a car for amusement rides. Herbert L. Bone, of Swissvale, gives us a railway car retarder and George W. Greene, of Harmarville, is credited with a fish net.

About 65 per cent of the town's transient temperament departed under one hat when Molinari, the great conductor, left after directing the symphony concert Sunday night. In the few days he was here, the little Italian seemed always the center of excitement.

He hadn't been in town 30 minutes before something happened. Unable to speak English, Molinari went directly from his train to the Mosque. A few minutes later an attendant at the Mosque called up the symphony society and said: "There's a little foreigner out here wants an orchestra. He's all excited and can't speak English."

Music critics agreed at Molinari conducted the orchestra to its greatest concert, but during the rehearsals the musicians themselves might have had misgivings. Molinari drove them on. In his native tongue he berated them. One musician under attack understood one word that Molinari directed at him time and again—amateurish.

"If that's the case," the rehearsing musician retorted, "I won't play at all." And he picked up his instrument and departed.

"Goot!" Molinari shouted after him, "goot!"

At rehearsal Molinari broke more batons than all the other conductors who have visited here. Even at the concert itself he finished the last number without the stick. Some say he hurled it at one of the musicians, others that he dropped it accidentally.

Even if you don't enjoy symphony music you would have had a good time at Molinari's concert, for the conductor himself was a whole show. Wrapped in a full-dress suit, which fitted him as tightly as the wrapper fits a stick of gum, Molinari was theatrical.

His face was a furious red as he slashed the air with his baton and muttered commands to the musicians. Everybody seemed agreed that Molinari's temperament was genuine, that he had time for nothing but music.

The collection of food and clothing for the few needy families in Ingram was a great success. The firemen of the borough announced the date they would collect the donations and asked the housewives to have the stuff ready.

Well, the firemen went from house to house and were pleasantly surprised by the number of baskets of food they found awaiting them in the hallways of the houses. Not until they returned to the fire house did they discover they had been trailing a grocery store wagon and collecting countless Sunday dinners.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 2.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

I believe my Christmas wish of not having our big men "predict" on New Year's, did some good. Anyhow, got a lovely wire from Charley Schwab, and we are gratified to find his "predictions" missing. Of course some of 'em you can't stop. J. P. Sloan will be "predicting" as long as his liniment lasts. Tom Lamont "predicted" for J. P. Morgan (not a difficult guy to predict for). Morrow wisely said nothing. If we could have eaten, and digested "optimistic predictions" during 1930 we would have been the fattest nation on earth.

MISS ESTHER TOPP

PRIZE PAINTER WEDS IN PARIS

Miss Esther Topp, prize-winning painter and Carnegie Tech art teacher, is Mrs. James G. Edmonds, a bride of a few days, it was learned here today.

She and Edmonds, former Pittsburgher, now with the Chicago Tribune in Paris, were married in the American Church in Paris, Tuesday at 11 a. m. with members of the art colony, including Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Bayard, of this city, attending.

The marriage followed a swift-moving romance that began a number of years ago in the home of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Ella G. Edmonds, and his sister, Mrs. Claude Jensen, Rippey street, East End.

Once more they met in New York, and after a long lapse, again in Paris this fall, where Miss Topp went to paint under some of the French masters. They announced their wedding plans to relatives several weeks ago. Her father is O. M. Topp, of Kincaid street, architect of the Jenkins Arcade and other buildings here.

The bride, who obtained a year's leave from Carnegie Tech, is reported arranging a studio apartment and will live for a while in Impasse du Rouet, Paris. She has won a number of prizes in the Associated Artists exhibition in Carnegie Galleries, winning the first prize in 1927.

POLICE ACT BLAMED ON POLITICS

Martin Association Members Angry; Chairman Hauled To Lockup, Freed, He Says

Many of Hays Borough's leading citizens are still wrathy today over a police "raid" on a private New Year's Eve card party and dance. The affair, held in Odd Fellows Hall, Hays, was a get-to-gether of members of the Richard W. Martin Association, an organization which conducts welfare work in co-operation with the Family Welfare Association.

Members charged that the police auto patrol was halted in front of the door, and two uniformed patrolmen entered and ordered the festivities halted. They took the chairman, Mort Heinzenberger, by the arm and escorted him to the patrol and thence to the Hays Borough police station, he charged. With him rode William Selleman, a fellow member.

McBRIDE MENTIONED

At the station, he said, the sergeant asked:

"Did you see C. J. McBride?"

McBride, chairman of the Thirty-first Ward, was called on the phone by the sergeant, but was not at home.

Police placed no charge against him, Heinzenberger said, and detained him only a short while. When high police officials were called by members of the association, he was quickly dismissed, he reported.

Police denied the incident, but Heinzenberger stated he would consult with the organization's attorneys, John Frankel and Ralph Smith.

PETITION BLAMED

Heinzenberger blames the "raid" and its embarassing aftermath on a petition the association is indorsing. He said:

"We have been trying to block the purchase of a $9,000 playground property for $100,000. The price is not only exorbitant, but the site is far out of reach of the children. We want an accessible playground site properly supervised.

"Since before Thanksgiving we have been raising funds to help the needy, and in co-operation with the family welfare, are caring for families of the district and furnishing milk to others.

DENIES PERMIT NEEDED

"Why should I see C. J. McBride? There is no permit needed for a private party, my attorney told me. We had less than 60 couples, and the older ones were playing cards.

"It was just that gang system of political retribution."

WOMAN'S DEATH PROMPTS QUIZ

Police and the coroner are investigating the death of Mrs. J. M. Jennings, 23, early today in a rooming house at 800 Sherman avenue.

Mrs. Elsie Brickel, who conducts the rooming house, informed police that Mrs. Jennings and a man had rented a room several weeks ago under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Cameron. The woman became ill yesterday and Dr. C. F. Boucek, 815 Lockhart street, was summoned. He advised her removal to a hospital, but she refused to go, police were told.

Early this morning Mrs. Jennings succumbed. The body was removed to the morgue, where an autopsy disclosed death was due to shock and hemorrhage.

The man posing as the woman's husband came in as she was dying, according to Mrs. Brickel. He left saying he was going for a doctor, but failed to return.

Police say they learned from examining effects of the dead woman that her husband evidently is an inmate of Rockview Penitentiary.

Magistrate's First Act Fine of $100

Looking for Stolen Bus 'Biggest' Job Of Police

The biggest job of the police for the New Year was their search for a 33-passenger blue and white Greyhound bus, stolen yesterday from the company's garage in New York. The bus, bearing New Jersey license plates, was believed headed for Pittsburgh, and police were asked to be on the lookout for it.

WOMAN 'BLUE,' SHOOTS SELF

Because of an alleged suicide attempt in her apartment at 1202 West North avenue, Wednesday night, a woman who told police she was Nancy E. Ellis, 25, was in St. John's Hospital today with a bullet wound in her left side.

Miss Louise Sonnati, proprietress of the rooming house, told police she knew the young woman as Mrs. Nancy Fromme. The flash of the revolver ignited the woman's kimono, burning her slightly.

The only explanation the woman offered for her act, police said, was that she was "blue."

PRIEST FETES 1,500 NEWSIES

More than 1,500 newsboys were guests of the Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, at the annual New Year Day dinner yesterday.

The boys gathered in the basement of the church, where a turkey dinner was served. Each boy was given a package of candy, nuts and fruit. More than 800 pounds of turkey were consumed, besides many crates of oranges and apples.

Before the boys were served, 1,700 unemployed men were fed. This made a total of approximately 3,700 meals served in the church during the day. Baskets of food were sent to needy families.

Yesterday's New Year party was the eighth annual affair Father Cox has staged for the boys. A special program of music, singing and dancing was furnished by entertainers from a local theater.

MONKEY BESTS BULL TERRIER

The Bostonian dignity of Sir Marder is ruffled today and he refuses to cease his angry sulking because a chattering South American, whose only name is "Jim," bested him in sanguinary combat.

For Sir Marder, pugnacious Boston bull terrier, is the proud possessor of four blue ribbons and a silver cup, while "Jim" is just a South African green monkey with no honors to his credit.

The proud little terrier was slashed severely on the head and his left leg was cut by the long, yellow teeth of Jim, after the dog and the monkey got loose in the Art Pet Shop, 104 Smithfield street.

Michael Maiorana, proprietor of the shop, said the battled waged fiercely for several minutes before he and his daughter, Clelia, succeeded in separating the animals. Jim escaped with a slight injury to his right paw.

ACCIDENTS HERE MARK HOLIDAY

Officials Act to End Risk Of Railroad Crossing As Two Men Are Killed

Automobile accidents in the Pittsburgh district over the holiday brought a toll of two dead and 19 injured.

As a result of the fatalities which occurred at grade crossings in Crafton and Coraopolis, plans for elimination of the crossings or danger-proof protection were being contemplated today.

Joseph Ehrin, 27, 912 Cabot way, Coraopolis, was instantly killed when an automobile which he was driving was struck by a passenger train of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad at the Main street crossing, Coraopolis, shortly before Wednesday night. Clarence Cole, 26, of School street, a passenger, was slightly injured.

KILLED ON CROSSING

J. J. Boyle, 32, 521 Fairywood street, died in Mercy Hospital of a fractured skull received when, police say, an automobile in which he was riding crashed into a locomotive of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Crafton avenue crossing, Crafton, early yesterday. His wife Gertrude was being treated for lacerations of the face and body and possible internal injuries. Wasyl Maysenko, of Hawthorne avenue alleged driver, disappeared after the accident, Crafton police said.

As a result of the two crashes, officials today were discussing anew plans to push elimination or danger-proof protection of grade crossings. T. J. Fitzpatrick, president of Crafton Council, said that work for eliminating the crossing would begin in the early spring. Other officials said automobiles would be forced to come to a complete stop until the improvement is made.

SENATOR HARRIS ACTS

Senator Frank J. Harris, hearing of the accidents, said that he was calling a meeting of the Senate Committee next week to discuss his bill. It provides for the elimination or protection of the 12,000 grade crossings in the commonwealth. He added:

"And 82 per cent of them are at present unprotected."

Five girls were suffering minor injuries today when automobiles in which they were riding collided at Broadway and Wentzell avenues, Beechview, early today.

DRIVERS ARRESTED

The Unger and Noulett girls were passengers in a machine driven, police say, by Robert Long, 18, of 2116 Saranac avenue. The other girls were passengers of William Larkins, Jr., 20, of 4619 Liberty avenue. Both drivers were arrested on reckless driving charges.

Those injured in accidents yesterday were Harry Goettman and Emil Bower, of 7920 Tioga street; Marshall Gernert, of near Oakdale; Francis Cyped, 25, of 616 Nineteenth avenue, Munhall; Alex Shablik, 47, of 2914 Grover avenue, McKeesport; John Leonard, 43, of 3428 Denny street; J. Wicks, 32, of 615 South Aiken avenue; Zelma Crawley, 19, of 511 Johnston avenue; Dolores Dorch, 19, of 829 Vista street; Joseph Butler, 23, of 2561 Woodstock avenue, Swissvale; Mrs. J. M. Parks, 28, of 5457 Kincaid street; Cliff Hackert, 45, of 7423 Finance street, and William Bell, 48, of 1314 Penn avenue, Wilkinsburg.

Goettman and Bower were injured when an automobile in which they were riding crashed against a pole in Frankstown road. They are in the Columbia Hospital.

COMPANY ASSAILS GARBAGE CONTRACT TO HIGH BIDDER

CHARGES CITY SHOWS FAVOR TO MONOPOLY

oncern Defends Its Ability To Carry Out Contract at $100,000 Saving in Year

Officials of the Modern Service Company, a new concern organized here for collection and disposal of garbage and rubbish, issued a statement criticizing city officials for ignoring its low bid in letting ntracts for collection of the refuse this year.

city awarded a contract to American Reduction Com for disposal of garbage and sh for one year, exclusive of North Side. The Alleghen age Company was given a ract for the North Side dis- Although the bid of the dern Service Company was ap- oximately 40 cents per ton be- ow the bids of the other two mpanies, it was refused.

UIPMENT LACK CITED

ity officials passed up the pur- ble opportunity to save about 100 a year on the ground the new company was with- ient equipment, but direc- the new concern declare ity's saving was "thrown the interest of continu- poly" by Modern Corporation directors said ay.

The company was not organized in the eleventh hour, but after a long study and investigation of the situation by competent engineers and business men. It was adequately financed and was prepared to guarantee performance by a bond. It had in readiness men of training and experience to direct its operation and it already had trucks and other equipment for collection.

PLANNED INCINERATORS

"The city officials seem to have proceeded upon the theory that any company, before bidding, must have erected elaborate incinerator plans, purchased modern and expensive truck and other equipment, and carried on its payroll a numerous and costly organization. The Modern Service Company had contracted for four incinerators for the disposal of garbage and rubbish. The incinerators would have been of the latest and most scientific type and would have been located at four suitable points in the city.

"It does seem that when a company with adequate capital and with well matured plans is prepared to risk its capital and back up its undertaking with bonds written by respecti- reputable companies, and ount of the contract, the amo bids which would and submit result in a sa ing of more than $100,000 annually to the taxpayers, the best interests of the community, being amply safeguarded, should have required the awarding of the contracts to such company. The failure to take advantage of the opportunity for a substantial saving and a highly improved service was thrown away in the interests of continuing a high-priced monopoly."

SUIT STILL PENDING

In awarding the contract, the city gave the work to a company against which it has still pending a suit for an amount originally set at $1,000,000 in rebates.

Dr. C. B. Matts, director of public health, said the city had made a careful study of the proposed means of collection and disposal by the new company and he was convinced that with its proposed organization and without any plant or equipment to function at the beginning of the year, the city could not, in the interests of health and sanitation, award it the contract, as the obstacles in the way of its successful fulfillment of the terms of the contract for the first few months were too great.

The new company had planned to ship collections to Youngstown incinerators until the new plants were erected here.

Two McKeesport Banks in Merger

The State Bank of McKeesport and the Pennsylvania Deposit Bank of McKeesport have merged into a new organization to be known as the Pennsylvania Deposit Bank of McKeesport. The new bank's assets are more than $2,000,000. Henry Freedman is president. It was announced that employes of the two banks are being carried by the new bank.

ARREST ENDS SEARCH FOR LEETSDALE GIRL'S ASSAILANT

MAN ADMITS ABDUCTION, POLICE SAY

Suspect Seized Hiding in Home of Sister After Angry Crowd Hunts Him

Search for the assailant of Mary Cicconi, 8, of Leetsdale, kidnaped and attacked last Saturday, was at an end today, police said, with the arrest of Joseph Armstrong, 30, of 1102 Bidwell street.

A crowd of men seeking vengeance for the attack on the girl, forced their way into Armstrong's home late Wednesday night in search of him, police revealed. Armstrong, arrested yesterday while hiding in the rafters in the attic of the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Olive Summers, at 1105 Ridge avenue, confessed the kidnaping, but said he remembered nothing of the attack, police reported.

POLICE FIND LETTER

When Patrolmen C. C. Coghill and Arch Marone searched Armstrong's home they found a letter prepared for mailing on the mantel, they said. Police said the missive, addressed to Armstrong's mother, disclosed he had confessed to his wife that he had kidnaped the girl after he had stolen an automobile. The visit of seven men to the house also was related in the letter, police asserted.

The Cicconi girl was found in the abandoned automobile in Darlington road, six miles west of Beaver Falls. The machine, police said, had been stolen from Charles and Brightridge streets, North Side, about six hours before the kidnaping.

WILL BE ARRAIGNED

Armstrong will face arraignment here for the alleged theft of the car, police said, and then will be turned over to Leetsdale authorities.

The Cicconi girl was taken first to the Providence Hospital at Beaver Falls and then to her home, but later was removed to the Valley Hospital, Sewickley, where her condition is said to be serious.

OFFICERS FIND BOY'S BODY IN ICY RIVER

Mail Carrier Sees Lad, Sled Dive Into Yough; Towboat Policemen Defy Cold

Braving the Youghiogheny River, heavy with ice after a towboat had been used to clear the way, Patrolman Ray Garrity, aided by Patrolmen James Bradley and John Hamilton, of the McKeesport police, recovered the body of Mike Osika, 11, of 108 Freeman ave., McKeesport, early today. The boy lost his life in a hundred of a score of playmates when, police said, he was riding on sled on the ice at the foot of Eighth street, McKeesport, yesterday afternoon.

Thomas J. Edmundson, of Dravosburg, a mail carrier, saw the lad plunge into the water and hurried to the police station to summon aid. Lieut. Samuel Merriweather and Patrolman William Corcoran acted on the scene in time to see the boy go down in midstream for the last time.

Police failed to reach the body until Mayor George H. Lysle obtained the services of the towboat J. H. Hillman to break the ice in the channel. Buffeted by cakes of ice several times, Garrity succeeded in recovering the body at 1:30 a. m., nearly nine hours after the boy was drowned.

MRS. MARTIN BALLARD

N. Y. INDUCTS ROOSEVELT

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 2 (AP)—Franklin Delano Roosevelt was inaugurated governor of New York for a second term with brief but colorful ceremonies.

The executive in an inaugural address warned against centralization of government and urged reform in local rule which he characterized as "archaic in design."

No military pageantry accompanied the ritual. Only a single cavalry troop escorted the governor from the executive mansion to the capitol. Even the assembly chamber decorations were reduced to simple gratoons of bunting in the interests of economy.

The governor deplored the "dangerous tendency to forget a fundamental of American democracy which rests on the right of a locality to manage its own affairs and the tendency to encourage concentration of power at the top of a governmental structure alien to our system and more closely akin to a dictatorship on the central committee of a communistic republic." He said an editor had "carefully informed him all local government had broken down."

IL DUCE RADIOS PEACE PLEA

ROME, Jan. 2 (INS.)—Peace and prosperity instead of war were advanced by Premier Mussolini as Italy's chief aim in world affairs in a radio address broadcast to the United States New Year Day.

Il Duce spoke in English. Directed references to Italian military affairs and critics who charged him with encircling in sword rattling were lacking but he dwelled emphatically upon his aversion for another war.

He warned that another conflict would be one in which, because of scientific discoveries, whole populations must become engaged and encountered.

The military drill given Italian children, he said, were intended solely for their physical and mental health.

Despite the inroads of the world economic depression on Italian prosperity, the country has been bolstered and stimulated toward recovery by Fascism, the Premier declared. He said his nation was on a firm economic and political foundation, notwithstanding adverse conditions.

STRIKE CLOSES WELSH MINES

CARDIFF, Wales, Jan. 2 (Universal)—All coal mines in South Wales were closed today as the strike of 150,000 miners entered its second day. There was no disorder at the pits.

The South Wales Miners Federation issued a statement expressing the hope that the compulsory stoppage will not fire the feelings of the men.

The strike adding the miners to South Wales' 180,000 unemployed was called yesterday despite the Labor government's eleventh hour effort to avert the stoppage regarded as but the first of the labor difficulties confronting Great Britain in 1931.

Milkman Robbed By Bandit on Bicycle

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2 (AP)—The New Year brought a bicycle bandit to Los Angeles.

L. W. Wilson, whose horse clatters along the pavements before dawn to the disgust of light sleepers, told police of the holdup.

Wilson said he heard an unexpected voice from beside his milk wagon order him to stop the horse and hold up his hands. He looked out to stare into the muzzle of a big pistol trained over the handlebars of a bicycle. Wilson reined in his steed.

Told to hand over his money, Wilson passed out all the change he had, $3. The gunman pedaled away into a dark alley.

THE TAILORED SUIT OF LACE MAKES DEBUT IN NEW MODE

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—An ounce of discretion is worth a pound of lace unless the lace be of the very finest quality. This oft reiterated warning is once more sounded because it looks like a "lace season" again next year. Chanel is concentrating on lace frocks and now Worth has introduced the tailored suit also of lace.

There can be no doubt about it that Worth's tailored suit of lace is going to be copied and many of the copies will be poor. For, with such a garment, the lace must be of the finest, so that it will hang perfectly and tailor well, and the workmanship must be superb. And these things cannot be in inexpensive copies of such a unique model. And so if you are tempted to purchase a lace suit we would advise you to place that ounce of discretion at the head of your shopping list and divert your desire for lace in the direction of a little lace frock of a conservative type, that is, of course unless you are prepared not only to pay handsomely for the suit, but to purchase it from a big firm, one that would not offer a copy unless it was an excellent duplicate.

AND NOW AFTER this sermon we will go on to the subject of the discourse which is the wonderful all lace suit just created by Worth. Needless to say, this model is attracting considerable attention and so we are glad to be able to send you a sketch of it. The jacket and skirt are of rather heavy wool and silk lace in black with the edges of the tiered sleeve and coat bound in black crepe. The draped bodice, attached below the waistline to the skirt, is of beige lace in a more delicate quality than is used for the suit. Three black silk "frogs" form the fastening of this unique costume.

VERY NEW AND FRESH is the little mid-season suit which is by Mirande. It is of dull black woolen with odd little corded "fans" set in to the edge of the jacket and skirt. The wide and deep collar is corded in the same manner. The jacket is fitted at the waistline by means of a flat peplum. A plaided taffeta blouse with a large bow collar lends a youthful and colorful note to the suit.

Pershing, Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces. His account covers the entire period from his appointment by President Wilson in 1917 until the signing of the Armistice in 1918—an absorbing and revealing narrative giving actual transcripts of historic incidents and history-making conferences. Milk and Cheese Contain Valuable Proteins

These two foods contain all elements that aid body building and give us health, strength, heat and energy.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
Former Health Commissioner of New York City
United States Senator From New York

If you don't drink milk, why don't you? Milk is one of the most valuable of our foods. All the milk products are extremely valuable to the human family. Milk and cheese have in them all the proteins, mineral elements and vitamins that go to build up the body.

Next to milk itself, I regard cheese as the most valuable of these protein foods. If you are not a cheese eater, why don't you join the ranks?

The fats of milk and cheese are easily assimilated. Many persons regard cheese as somewhat indigestible. It will probably be found that such persons have some constitutional peculiarity preventing easy digestion of the fats.

Milk, when taken by the adult in large quantities, is better digested if taken with other foods. The young child and the older child really require it. The slogan "Drink a quart of milk a day" is the best advice anyone can give you. If more people would give heed to it, there would be better health.

VARIED DIET BEST

In the past, Americans have not appreciated the great dietary value of cheese. We are great meat eaters. It is far better to have a varied diet, in which is a moderate proportion of meat. Fish, poultry, shellfish and cheese in different forms should be used for the protein value they possess.

We do not begin to eat as much cheese as our neighbors across the seas. Americans consume about four pounds of cheese per person annually. In Switzerland, the average is 9 pounds; Holland, France and Denmark come next with slightly more than 13 pounds; while England and Germany average in the neighborhood of nine pounds.

RICH IN PROTEINS

Cheese is rich in proteins, making it one of the cheapest and most valuable of foods for the repairing and building up the body tissues and bones. It is important because it retains the valuable minerals, lime, phosphorus and sulphur of the milk. There is an appreciable amount of vitamin A and some iron in milk and the milk products. The fat of cheese, like that in milk, is easily assimilated.

Perhaps you will be surprised to know that the world makes some 287 varieties of cheese. We should take heed of the experience of other nations and make greater use of this good food.

We need the protein foods to give us health and strength, heat and energy, and the strengthening of teeth and bones. There is every reason why everyone should drink milk and eat cheese. There are really very few persons who cannot take them to advantage.

Another Jolt for Coast. — Card's Poor Road Club.
Alabama's Decisive Win. — Gossip Costs Rue! Job.
Pitt Floormen Lauded. — Corbett Warns Boy.

FAR WEST'S 'SUPERIORITY' DISPROVED

FOR SOME TIME to come, probably, we shall not hear so much about the "superiority" of Pacific Coast football. Wallace Wade's Alabama warriors did a job that left no room for doubt or arguments when they crushed Washington State under the top-heavy score of 24 to 0 in the Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena yesterday, and following the Los Angeles debacle in which Notre Dame romped to a 27 to 0 victory at the expense of Southern California's supposedly mighty Trojans, the decisive triumph of the Southerners appears to indicate that the edge claimed for coast teams, as compared with those in other parts of the country, existed only in the imagination of Far Western coaches and critics.

Wallace Wade

Stanford defeated Dartmouth during the 1930 season, St. Mary's downed Fordham and Washington State beat Villanova, but any margin by which those performances may have seemed to spell for the quality of gridiron play on the Pacific slope was more than offset by the manner in which Notre Dame and Alabama routed by a total of 51 points to none what were aimed to be the most powerful two elevens in the Coast Conference in a number of years.

NOT ONLY DID Bama platoon intelligently and consistently as well as showing each trench foot to accepting the Notre Dame idea of sending in fresh troops, but keep clear the Southern record of never having been defeated in a Rose game but it won by one of the most decisive scores ever made in the Pasadena classic. Only once has a larger shutout score been registered—California's 28-0 victory over Ohio State in 1921. Southern California made 45 points against Pitt and Notre Dame made 27 against Stanford, but in both instances the losing team scored.

This makes the third time Alabama has made the trip to California for the Rose game without meeting defeat. It beat University of Washington in 1926 and tied Stanford in 1927. The coast may lose some of its enthusiasm for the Pasadena holiday football feature unless there is an early change in the trend of things. Of the last eight New Year's Day games in the Rose Bowl the Pacific teams have won only two, defeating Pitt on both occasions. The coast may find small comfort in the distinction of staging the games when some other part of the country does the celebrating.

FRANK LANE, Cincinnati basketball official who work Western Conference games and who has been referee or umpire in several of Pitt's contests this season, notably the Ohio State, Purdue and Indiana ones, has some nice words to say for the Panther passers after their defeat last night.

Admitting their basketball ability he adds that the thing which handicapped him most was their good nature. Even when they were being kicked around by the big boys, they never got sore but kept right on with their game.

Willie Arture

THE PANTHER PLAYER to make the most favorable impression upon Lane in that and other respects was Capt. Willie Arture. According to Lane, Arture is not only a fine player but also one of the most gentlemanly captains that the Cincinnati official has encountered or seen. And Frank has met a lot of them in his travels around the big college courts of the Middle West and the East. "If all captains showed the same spirit of courtesy toward the officials, even in the heat of combat, officiating would be a real pleasure," was the gist of Lane's comment on Arture to friends at The Stadium.

ONE FEATURE OF the National League's official records for the 1930 baseball season, recently made public, shows that in winning two of the three world series games played on their own grounds but losing all three of the contests staged in Philadelphia the Cardinals were only running true to their form for the year as a whole. For they were clearly a home club, making a percentage of .688 for games played in St. Louis or an average slightly better than two out of every three, whereas their road percentage was only .506 or practically only an even break.

And the club that finished second in the pennant race, Chicago, did no better than the Cards away from home, the traveling percentage of the Cubs also being only .506, while at home they made a mark of .662. The Giants were the league's best road club, and even in their case the percentage away from home, .553, was far below the home average, which was .595. The Giants, Cards and Cubs were the only clubs in the Heydler circuit to win more games on the road than they lost.

THE BASEBALL GOSSIPERS have thrown the owners of the Boston American League club to a decision to get rid of a veteran just recently acquired before he has had a chance to don a Red uniform.

A few weeks after the Red Sox bought Muddy Ruel from the Senators to bolster their catching department, this led to rumor that Ruel eventually would supplant Shano Collins as manager of the Boston club, and broken this confidence in Collins and avert a troublesome situation the owners have needed to dispose of Muddy as soon as possible.

Muddy Ruel

"RUEL NEVER WILL be the manager of the Red Sox so long as I have the club," President Bob Quinn declares. "And furthermore, I am on the lookout right now for a chance to make a deal for Muddy. I've come to the conclusion that it will be the part of wisdom to pass Ruel on to some other team. I never intended him for anything but a catcher. Even the talk that he was to be an assistant to Collins and a sort of batters coach was unofficial. It's not my way to make things awkward or difficult for the man I have picked to manage my club. I regret the acquisition of Ruel and am afraid it's not a happy situation for the team. Collins would be the last man to make any protest about the situation, yet I've heard so much about it from others that I've reached the conclusion Ruel must go somewhere else. I'm not intending to give him away or anything like that. There are several clubs that want him and a trade won't be difficult."

ALWAYS A STICKLER [illegible] in boxing, Jim Corbett in discussing with Bo Hecht the latter's contest go of Max Baer pointed to the bout [illegible] Schaaf as now considered [illegible] nothing but a [illegible] he thinks will go [illegible] the cuffing he got.

The former champion contends that even the hardest hitter must have a trick or two up his sleeve to take it on out of the dumb slugger's class. He must use his brains, his hands and his feet, must have defense as well as an attack. No real puncher ever got by on [illegible] one, and the fellow who leads with his chin is bound to be knocked out, sooner or later.

SCOTT BREAKS LONG RECORD OF PITT CUBS

By JESS CARVER.

The first [illegible] of the new year [illegible] a big [illegible] of P[illegible] kennel teams. [illegible] a defeat from the first 30 minutes of play, the Panthers moved to a well-drilled, alert and very capable Indiana University quintet in the Stadium Pavilion. The score of the contest was 27 to 18.

Despite [illegible] obstacles in the way of a fight, a hockey game and another intercollegiate basketball encounter, the Panthers [illegible] before a [illegible] which not only [illegible] the downfall of the Golden Cubs, but also the first defeat of a Pitt freshmen team in [illegible] and 51 consecutive games. Scott High, of North Braddock, coached by Johnny Fred Lapsley, Penn State basketball and baseball luminary, put an end to the winning proclivities of the Panther Cubs by smashing [illegible] down by 28 to 23.

PITT TIED

[illegible] Dartmouth, [illegible] Panther in a [illegible] took from them away from the Panther. The team was dead on its feet and was further handicapped by the [illegible] of Dep Smith, crack sophomore guard. Smith is suffering sore footlocks and rode the bench all night.

Indiana opened up to take a 5 to 1 lead, which it never relinquished. The Panther attack cracked up on the [illegible] pre-ended by the opposition's [illegible] defensive. Led by Forward Miller, who dropped in [illegible] three field goals, [illegible] took a 13 to 5 lead at half time. All Pitt's first period points came from the foul line, the locals being unable to sink one from the floor.

HOOSIERS BOOST LEAD

Hector, psychological measures [illegible] Doc Carlson, between halves failed to do the team any immediate good, for 10 minutes, exactly, half of the last half passed away before Timmy Lawry finally crashed through with Pitt's initial field goal. Its men had worked on and improved its lead during the time the Panthers were busy getting nowhere and the ball game was safely in the bag once Pitt's attack did begin to click.

Lawry came through with two more goals and three out of three fouls, while Willie Arture and Al Wroblesky also sent baskets zipping through from out on the floor to help Pitt's total to 19 before the game ended.

The Hoosiers were fast, held an advantage in height and weight and were in all a pretty good basketball team. I don't think they were as good as Purdue, although they were much steadier on the defense. On only one or two occasions could the Panthers [illegible] for shots under the hoop and then, they miscued on these.

W. KOWALLIS BACK

Willie "Dooley" Kowallis got back into the action after having been on the bench since the game with Carnegie Tech, nursing a sore elbow. Indiana's defense checked him very closely all the way with the result that he had only about three shots at the hoop, all of which he missed.

The play of Joe Veller at guard for Indiana was outstanding. He directed the attack of the team in [illegible] fashion. The lineup:

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF WEDNESDAY: DIONISIUS EXIGUUS, CREATOR OF THE CHRISTIAN ERA—Dionisius Exiguus, a monk from Scythia, who died in the year 544, became the abbot of a monastery in Rome, and is the man on whose calculations our Christian era is based. His calculations established the year of the birth of Christ as the year 753 of the Roman era. It has been known for a long time that Dionisius made a mistake in his computations. From the date of Herod's famous "massacre of the babes," and from other contemporary data, the birth of Christ has been computed as having taken place in the year 746 of the Roman era. In other words, Christ was born in 6 B. C., and, but for Dionisius' error, this would be New Year 1935. THE COW TREE—The Cow Tree of Central America and Venezuela (Brosimum Galatodendron, of the natural order Moraceae) is known as the Palo de Vaca, or Palo de Leche. The stem contains a milky latex or juice of an agreeable, creamy odor, which tastes like real cow's milk, and this juice flows out in considerable quantities when tapped. Prof. Record, of Yale, and Representative Henry Kuvlen, of the Marshall Field Museum, both have had the distinction of "milking" the cow tree in Guatemala.

BULLEY, RUDY BOX TONIGHT

Two good club fighters box the [illegible] of the weekly mill now in the Moose Temple downtown tonight. They are Young Rudy of Charleroi, long a favorite with the local fans because of his [illegible] milling, and Billy Bulley of Mt. Clemens, Mich.

Bulley broke in here by beating Larry Kaufman of McKeesport handily in one of the bouts on the Christmas card at Motor Square Garden. He proved himself a good two-fisted puncher. He came in the ring dates over a period of seven years.

Billy Bucci, Necto middleweight of the Hill boys, Al Bocket, Sheridan A. C. opponent in the semi-final, which promises to be an other action bout. Mose Butch, southpaw bantamweight of the Hill, and Andy Tomonsky of Turtle Creek are in the second bout and Eddie Guba of Clairton and Frankie Pattison of Ambridge [illegible] in a return bout in the opener at 8:30.

Between Rounds

Eddie Shea mingles with Andy Martin in the windup of an all-star show in St. Louis tonight. Dave Abad meets Ruby Graham, Harry Mickey Cohen meets Spug Myers and Marty Fields tangles with Joe Rivers in other bouts on the bill.

He resumed duty at Motor Square Garden next Monday night as [illegible] the club being unable to line up a sufficiently attractive main bout on short notice following the show of last night. The next show at the Garden is slated for one week from Monday, when Paul Berlenbach of Cleveland will be one of the principals in the main bout.

GRIMSON TIDE VANQUISHES COUGARS, 24-0

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 2.—Dixie football was paraded within the enclosure of the Pasadena Rose Bowl for the fourth time New Year's Day and for the fourth time a Southern team left the Tournament of Roses gridiron without being forced to bow to the gladiators of the Pacific Coast.

By defeating Washington State College, 1930 champions of the Coast, 24-0, Coach Wallace Wade's Alabama Crimson Tide retained the undefeated record of the Land of Cotton and left the field having conquered 65,000 spectators that they rate second only to Notre Dame among the 1930 football teams of the land.

In previous meetings with Southern teams the Pacific Coast has been able to do no better than one tie, and three defeats, Alabama having previously defeated Washington University and tied Stanford, and Georgia Tech having conquered California.

DECEPTION STOPS COUGARS

It was deception more than any other factor that accounted for the Bama victory, for while the Bama line outcharged the Cougars, the maraud in the front line trenches was not as great as on the scoreboard.

Turk Edwards, 230-pound Washington State tackle, proved to be the most spectacular lineman on the field and his play appeared superior to that of Fred Sington, Alabama's all-America tackle. It also stood out over the play of Mel Hein, Washington State's all-America lineman.

Washington State held the advantage in the first period when Wade had only two regulars, Elmore and Capt. Clement, on the field. The Cougars were unable to score, however, and just before the period ended Wade sent his regulars into the game. The tide of battle changed at once.

Soon after the second period opened Bama broke the scoring ice. Alabama after an exchange of kicks, took the ball on its 40-yard line. An off side penalty offset two gaining plays and then, with the ball on the 36-yard line, Jimmy Moore came dashing in from end as if a reverse play was planned, took the ball from Campbell and, dashing back, tossed it far down the field to the fleet Flash Suther, whose twinkling toes had carried him over the green turf beyond the Washington defense. Suther caught the ball on Washington's 36-yard ribbon and had an unimpeded path to the goal line.

PASS INTERCEPTED

Campbell made short work of the addition of the extra point with a placement.

The cheers had hardly died when yells from Alabama and groans from the Cougar sections were repeated. State turned to the air for support and found it unprofitable. Eberdt intercepted a pass on the Cougars' 37-yard line and on the next play Moore tossed a pass to Smith, a fast end, who was not stopped until he was on the one-yard line. Campbell sneaked across for the second touchdown on the next play and again kicked the goal for the extra point.

The third touchdown came a bit later. Alabama ran a punt to its own 47-yard line, and Campbell then added nine and one-half yards on the next play. A pass failed and with six inches to go for a first down Campbell slanted off right tackle, broke through and, once in the clear, bowled a clean pair of heels to all opposition.

In the third period Wade again resorted to trickery and sent in his reserve backfield. Alabama worked the ball down to States's 22-yard line and, on being stopped there, decided if it could not get a touchdown it would take a field goal. Fats Whitworth, a big guard, was pulled out of the line and showed that he knew what to do with his

GAMENESS SAVES RODGERS FROM KAYO

Record Holiday Crowd Sees Jackets Bow to Buffalo in Fast Battle

DATTO FLOORS JACKIE OFTEN AT START

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Floored four times in the second round in which he was saved by the bell and seemingly doomed to an early knockout defeat, Jackie Rodgers local Negro featherweight puncher, proved his gameness by rallying to go the distance against Johnny Datto, dynamiting Filipino of Cleveland, in the 10-round windup of the New Year's boxing show in Motor Square Garden last night.

The bout marked the culmination of a years effort on the part of local promoters to bring the pair together and they had to be matched four times before one of the other did not cancel the engagement. The fight was worth waiting for.

BOTH ARE INJURED

After the bout, Datto exhibited a badly swollen right hand, an old injury, which also bothered him when he boxed Joey Thomas at Hickey Park last summer. Rodgers had a cut on his right eye and this optic was puffed and the other one discolored, but he said his eyes did not bother him, as appeared to be the case over most of the route. He recently underwent an operation for an injury to his left eye and it was feared further damage had been done.

Datto finally came through with a fine exhibition in Pittsburgh after having previously lost to Andy Martin and Thomas here. He won all but the third, fourth and seventh rounds, in which Rodgers kept on the move circling about the ring and outpointing him with a stabbing left hand and the sixth, which was even. Datto won his rounds by decisive margins, while Rodgers boxing easily after being so nearly out, just shaded his foe in two of his three winning sessions.

Rodgers started off in his usual deliberate manner, loafing until late in the opening round and riding with Datto's leads and crosses. Late in the round he made Datto miss a right and countered heavily with one of his own to the head and then mixed until the bell.

FLOORED FOUR TIMES

At the start of the second round, Jackie began to steam up to his work, and, as he rushed in with a left hook, Datto nailed him with a well-timed right, delivered at short range. It hit the mark and Rodgers fell forward and then pulled himself to his knees to take a count of nine. He reeled under another right and closed in to mix at close quarters and was sent down again, but pulled himself up after a short count. Datto pounded him with a barrage of blows from both fists and finally sent him down again face first, this time in Jackie's corner, with his head pointed toward the ring post. It looks a like curtains for Jackie, but he pulled himself together and was up at nine and covered to weather the storm but went down again just before the bell which came to his rescue at the count of six.

Considering his close call, Rodgers did remarkably well when he came out for the third round and began to use the ring, circling about and stabbing Datto off balance repeatedly with his left and making the Filipino's nose bleed. He continued this in the next round. In the fifth, Datto began to press again and raked Jackie fore and aft with loaded punches, but Jackie fought him off just before the finish. Jackie came back to hold his own on boxing in the sixth, and in the seventh flashed his best round. Gaining confidence, and with some of the sting gone from Datto's punches, Rodgers waded in and forced the fighting, making Datto retreat under his slugging attack and finally fight back in self-defense at the bell.

GAMENESS SAVES JACKIE

That was as far as Jackie's bid to turn the tide went, for in the final three rounds, Datto had things about as he wished. The Filipino chipped Jackie early in the eighth and put him on the defensive and slammed home so many blows that the local man finally just stood and covered up and took them. Jackie tried to counter Datto's leads early in the ninth, but was cut-punched throughout that session and also took quite a beating in the tenth.

Rodgers was anything but disgraced in defeat, for the punching ability of Datto is well known and Jackie really did an amazing job of coming back and going the distance as well as he did. He displayed ring cunning as well as gameness to accomplish the trick.

Rodgers weighed 124 pounds and his opponent was a half-pound heavier at 3 p. m.

NEGROES IN THRILLER

Harold Scarney, of Youngstown, 133, repeated an earlier victory over Harry Williams, Negro of Swissvale, 178, in the six-round semi-final. He outpunched Williams in every round but the fifth and wound up the battle by flooring Harry for a count of two just before the final bell.

It remained for two Negro middleweights to give the fans a Dempsey-Firpo thrill in the second bout, which Marcus Noll, southpaw, of the Hill, 154½, finally won on a technical knockout over Jack Tracey of the North Side, 160 after 58 seconds of the fifth round. Noll, who was substituting on a few hours' notice for Nick Polis, of Aliquippa, who canceled because of the illness of his mother, was down twice for counts of nine in the first round and was coming back to hurt Tracey with left swings in the

DOWN, BUT NOT OUT

This looks like curtains for Rodgers, on the third of four knockdowns in the second round, but he got up at the count of nine. The bell saved him later at six and he rallied to make a commendable comeback and finish.

DUKES TOP LEHIGH

Lehigh University took another one on the chin last night when it was the victim of Duquesne University's 1-el-lifting on-laught 32 to 25 in a game in which the Dukes made a mighty rally in the second half to clinch matters. Lehigh has also met defeat at the hands of Carnegie Tech and Geneva on its tour of Western Pennsylvania.

With the Dukes leading by a bare 13-12 margin at the half and Lehigh appearing to be the best team after a remarkable start the teams played up and back until, with little more than five minutes to go, the Bluffites started an offensive which put them well to the front. Lehigh made a gallant attempt to keep pace, its final points being scored with only 15 seconds to play.

In the preliminary fracas, Duquesne's Finches defeated Bellevue High, 35-19. The lineups:

Fast skating, furious battling, intense excitement and the biggest crowd ever to witness a hockey game in Pittsburgh provided all the earmarks of a championship fray as the Buffalo Bisons defeated the local Yellow Jackets, 3 to 1, at Duquesne Garden last night.

More than 6,000 fans filled every nook and cranny of the Craig street arena for the holiday joust. Crowds numbering better than 5,000 attended championship games here in the past, but never before since the Garden was remodeled, and the seating capacity enlarged had it been jammed to capacity.

In achieving their triumph the International League pace-setters snapped the Jackets' string of six successive home successes and handed them the first setback they have sustained here since November 20. Incidentally, it was the Bisons who stopped the locals on that occasion. Pittsburgh has not been able to take the measure of the league leaders in four attempts.

MARTIN, TAUGHER STAR

Ronald Martin, a sleepy-looking forward who "comes to" with a vengeance when he finds himself in possession of the puck in the vicinity of an enemy cage, and Bill Taugher, lanky goalie who can and does perform feats of magic in the nets, were the invaders who most displeased the local puckmen and the enthusiastic throng.

Martin won the fray for the Bisons by scoring goals in the first and second periods, and Taugher saved the decision for his club by pulling off one amazing stop after another.

Duke McCurry's record of not having participated in a losing game this season was broken, but it was not Duke's fault. He took an accurate pass from Roger Smith to cage Pittsburgh's only goal, after 13 minutes of play in the final stanza, when the locals were trailing by 2-0.

TOUGH BREAK

About a minute later Capt. Tory Gregg slipped the puck under Goalie Taugher, who had dropped to the ice to make a falling save, and the goal judge flashed the red light. More than 6,000 voices were raised in as many cheers as the light indicated that the score had been tied, but when Referee Mike Podden lifted Taugher to his feet the disc was found to be about an inch outside the net and no goal was allowed.

McIntyre, space wing, and Cox, regular goalie, sat on the bench as their mates went down to defeat. McIntyre remained out of uniform so that Flock Lowry, former Pirate, and brother of Jerry Lowry, another ex-Bucs, might be given a trial. Flock accoutred himself with some ease, and Goalie Bud Fisher recalled from the Jackets' Niagara Falls farm to pinch hit for Cox out with a broken hand.

Cubs May Play Spring Games At Night

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Officials of the Chicago Cubs are considering a plan to play all or some of their 1931 spring exhibition games on the Los Angeles baseball park at night, it was announced here today.

Possibility of night baseball in Los Angeles is said to be unavoidable for considering the plan, it was said.

GOALIE HARD TO BEAT

Martin took advantage of a rebound from Rein and Lenerman to raise the puck in the first and second periods respectively, and sent Both beat Fisher in the third stanza. Five Jackets were in the vicinity of the Buffalo cage and Rein was unprotected.

The locals attacked in five-man sallies from the start to the finish of the three stanzas, one of the most thrilling periods ever seen here. Almost every member of the organization had a good shot at the Buffalo net at one time or another, but the brilliant Taugher turned 'em all aside and looked impartial.

McCurry's goal climaxed one of the 100-odd scrimmages that the Jackets staged in the vicinity of the Buffalo net during the hotly fought affair. The body checks were frequent and stiff, and Cahill drew a major penalty for slashing Eddie Oudbier over the head with his stick in the second period.

DETROIT HERE TOMORROW

Although outplayed, the locals were far from outfought and the Detroit Olympics are liable to run into copious quantities of opposition when they come here tomorrow night. The lineup:

N. Y. AMERICANS, LEAFS FIGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—(AP.)—Three of the seven games in the National Hockey League were marked by free play, one of them ending in a free-for-all fight on the ice.

The Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Americans, rivals for fourth place in the Canadian Division standings, added their first regular game of the year in a battle on the ice after the Leafs had gained the coveted position with a 2-to-0 triumph. A battle between George Patterson and Phanu Conn, trailed the warfare, and both teams promptly joined in. Ten min. of penalties came out of the scrap, while two more had been called earlier in the game.

Rail [illegible] pointed upward [illegible] unsettling [illegible] early trading [illegible] some of the [illegible] hurled upward [illegible]

The rally was facilitated by the unexpectedly quick breaking of the year-end credit [illegible] money renewed at 3 per cent [illegible] dropped [illegible] to the lowest since September. Reduction of the discount rate of the Bank of France from 2½ to 2 per cent, placing it on a par with the New York rate, was viewed [illegible] tively. With the Paris [illegible] 1 per cent lower than London, the drain on London's gold stock should be lightened.

The rail shares were helped by the knowledge that heads of the eastern trunk lines had promptly resumed conferences to work out the details of the four-party unification plan.

The oils were braced by developments leading to the hope that the slump in gasoline prices may be arrested, the Standard of New Jersey announcing an increase in tank car [illegible] cent a gallon, F. O. B. Atlantic Seaboard.

Earlier in the week Standard announced an increase in tank wagon prices in the East.

The motor shares responded to announcements of new models and prices, although prices are lower in most cases, reductions having been made in the hope of stimulating sales. While estimates of 1931 production are around 4,000,000 units, against 5,500,000 in 1930 and 5,600,000 in 1929, makers have made drastic reductions in the latter overhead costs which developed during the peak year of 1929.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Wheat tended upward and [illegible] downward early today. Unexpected higher Liverpool quotations and reports of further delay to the Australian harvest influenced wheat. Friends of higher prices contended the New Year began with all bearish factors regarding wheat more than discounted. Opening unchanged to ½ cent higher, wheat afterward held steady. Corn started ¼ cent off to ½ cent up and subsequently underwent an all around sag.

The following quotations were furnished by Board of Trade [illegible] Masten & Co.:

TIGER HEART -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

Kitty Fears That Jim Does Not Care for Her

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The day before her marriage to Jim Tracy, wealthy Connie Calvert learns through Duke Garson, underworld character, of the existence of a half-sister, Kitty, by her father's secret first marriage. Kitty, a product of the slums, demands $100,000 for her silence. Connie, glad to have found her sister, offers to take her home. Kitty refuses. Connie is favorably impressed by Duke's magnetism. When Jim objects to her interest in Kitty, Connie breaks her engagement. She realizes Jim is mainly interested in her money and that she does not love him. Connie tells her mother about Kitty. Connie sees Kitty and learns of her laborious daily struggle for existence. Kitty goes home with Connie and is welcomed by Mrs. Calvert. When Jim visits he takes an interest in Kitty. Connie, believing Jim a philanderer, is concerned for Kitty. Kitty admits to Connie that she likes Jim.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIII

So Kitty was crazy about Jim! This seemed odd to Connie, even though she herself, but shortly before, had fully intended to plight her life with his. Now, as though some inner revolution had overthrown all of her previous emotion, she found herself completely outside any disturbance that could be Connie's by his masculine attractiveness. Jim was still Jim, however appealing or likable, no matter how vital his shortcomings might be; she could scarcely conceive of him acting under any circumstances without his personal charm.

"I think he's wonderful," Kitty breathed. "Why, for me, he let him go Connie?"

The fu[illegible] plain to Kitty [illegible] the broken engagement. Connie from a direct question. The irridescent fabric of other girl's mind was rejected logical reasoning.

"Marriage between me would have been a mistake," Connie said gently. "I'm not surprised at finding him interesting, but to amaze me a little that you are crazy about him."

"I'm astonished at [illegible]"

"How deep do [illegible] goes?"

Liked Him From Start

"It's a funny thing, [illegible] thing just came over me, Connie. That's all. He looked good to me right away from the start, but I didn't know I was going crazy about him. Not even last night when we were walking around the yard. I liked him then, of course, but the whole thing hit me today, suddenly, with a wallop. It was like something had hit me a hard crack. You won't be mad at me will you, Connie?"

"Of course not." Connie [illegible] a dreadful accident [illegible] have happened to Kitty.

"It might be an accident, but I don't think it's dreadful." The irridescent fabric of Kitty's mind within Kitty had [illegible] and suffused her with an [illegible] warm radiance. Connie's forehead, the low [illegible] hair gave her an [illegible] light of the veranda [illegible] of beauty. All of [illegible] and self-assurance seemed [illegible] whatever she felt. Connie was not one [illegible]

"You will have to give him up, Kitty," Connie exclaimed.

Kitty wavered, but [illegible] make a play for him [illegible] make a play for him [illegible] happened. How [illegible] a while I didn't start? [illegible] I had made up [illegible] and used my brain to [illegible] thing. Whatever [illegible] came over me [illegible] I feel it right [illegible] expressed a clinched [illegible] to be loved. It just [illegible] me one thing [illegible] I think or say has anything to do with it. Can you understand that, Connie?"

Connie ignored the query. Her own feelings were not the point of issue. It was important, at once, to understand clearly what had happened.

"Does Jim know about this?"

"I didn't tell him."

"It would be terrible for you if he didn't feel the same way."

Connie Disturbed

Secretly, Connie told herself it would be unfortunate if Jim himself shared Kitty's feelings, but tact demanded reticence. Opposition probably would only add fuel to Kitty's flame.

"Do you think he felt it, too?"

"I'm not sure. He might feel it a little, but I don't suppose a girl like me could interest him much. It would take someone like you, Connie, someone his equal, to make him fall. But that hasn't got a thing in the world to do with the way I feel toward HIM. I'm hooked."

Her voice, her own surprise, were colored by a kind of superstitious awe at the emotion that enfolded her. Evidently she was as puzzled as Connie, but she had convinced herself of the authenticity of her own feelings.

Connie asked, "Haven't you felt this way before about anyone else?"

"Oh, sure, but it was always milder," Kitty admitted frankly. "Take Duke Garson, for instance, maybe there was a time I was almost in love with him, but almost means nothing. I'd even thought about marrying other fellows, but I don't have to think about Jim. My heart feels him. He's so different from any other men I ever knew."

Connie's disturbance grew, the very frankness of Kitty made the situation increasingly difficult.

"Jim is very much different from the men you knew on Tenth avenue," she told her. "His whole background is different, and I don't think you understand him any more than he understands you."

Kitty Is Frightened

"I was wondering about that," Kitty said, gazing blankly ahead of her. "Do you suppose there is really any difference between men and women—I mean, do money and education and society make them as different as, well, as dogs and cats are different?"

Probably not," Connie admitted, "but Jim is such an individual person. If it is at all possible, dear, I think you ought to put your feelings aside until you know him better. It's quite possible you wouldn't like him at all."

"I could overlook a lot," Kitty declared, "but maybe I won't have the chance. It's ten to one he's still in love with you."

"Don't you believe that for a minute," Connie protested. "Jim was never really in love in his life. I actually doubt his capacity for love."

"It's a funny thing about me," Kitty mused, "I always thought I was hardboiled, but now I've turned soft. I'm actually scared to death he can't see me at all."

Suddenly, disastrously, she flung an arm across the back of her chair and, burying her head in the crook of her elbow, her body racked with sobs.

DAILY TRUE STORY A Woman's Privilege

As John Dorset ran breathlessly up the steps, rang the bell, and stood fidgeting and waiting for the maid, a multitude of thoughts beseiged his mind.

What if he were too late? What if another had gone ahead of him? Suppose this young Gorman had been plying his efforts at the DeVoe home? He gave the latter thought a mental kick as a picture of the be-scarfed, over-tailored, over-fed collegian came to his mind. She would not even be amused with such a plaided sheik. And yet Gorman was young and a friend of the family. Oh why did not the maid come! This chap—

The maid suddenly appeared and Dorset fumbled for a card. Finding none, he gave his name instead and was led into the drawing room to wait. His thoughts were continuing in their former direction when a slight noise in the doorway attracted him.

She stood there watching him, but not for long. He was on his feet in an instant, across the room, taking the two outstretched hands she extended to him as he approached. The same smile was on her lips, the same lights played in the waves of her hair, the same curve was in the black of her lashes, the same mysterious something was in the depths of her brown eyes that had always intoxicated him. It had been that way from the first.

"Why, Mr. Dorset, what brings you here?" she exclaimed.

"You!" he stated instantly, startled into frankness and eloquence beyond his natural reserve. The statement brought a tinge of color to her cheeks and terror to his heart. "I mean—" he stammered. "I mean, You see—I mean—I came—Oh thunder, Miss DeVoe, I mean just what I said! I came to see you."

She laughed but the color did not subside. "But, Mr. Dorset, I thought you loved the ivy-clad walls of old Sparta so well you would never leave them. How is Sparta, anyway?"

Dorset Proposes

"The same yesterday, today, and forever cultured rustics and careful spendthrifts. I've been promoted and will move into the new faculty apartments. But how about you? The city is so much to your liking that I always wondered how you could leave it for Sparta."

"Sparta did have its rushes, didn't it? I shall never forget how they applauded Harnoff in the middle of his sonata, and how Harnoff was the only one embarrassed. But then Harnoff did not even come to Atlanta. Perhaps our general public would have done much worse than Sparta's."

John Dorset came straight to the point.

"Miss DeVoe, Rosalee—I've come to Atlanta on serious business. I have no errand here at all but to see you. I came to tell you that I love you, to ask you to be my wife. Will you?"

"Mr. Dorset!"

"Don't be shocked at me, Rosalee—Miss DeVoe. For four years I've kept from telling you this at the cost of torture. I could not tell you while you were at Sparta, you a student and I your teacher. It would have interfered with your work and with mine when neither of us had the right to give up. But I have felt all the while that you know. You could not have kept from it. You will never know how I longed to tell you."

Her eyes filled with amazement and fright mingled. Dorset went on.

"I've had to keep on working when I longed for freedom to tell you," he said. "But I was not free to love you when I owed mountains of debts for my college education and when I held no higher position than that of assistant in freshman English. For the first two years I thought it was hopeless, but here I am today, free of debt, with a master's degree from summer study, and with a promotion awarded me for next year, and you graduated from Sparta last week."

Refuses Proposal

He came very close to her.

"Rosalee, will you marry me?" he asked.

She stopped breathing as she sought to answer. Almost inaudibly her words came to him.

"I cannot. You—do not know yet."

"But I do know, Rosalee," he replied eagerly. "Have I waited and fought myself these four years for nothing? I want you. I love you. I have waited and slaved while I waited, for this moment. And I've been fair, Rosalee."

"Was that fair or just wise?" she asked.

"To be wise is always to be fair," replied the teacher in him, then yielded the ascendancy to another in his person. "You have not answered my question, Rosalee."

Her words were so low that he bent his head to hear them, and his face touched her hair. For a space he heard nothing but a ringing in his ears.

"But you do not understand," she was saying. "It's too late."

"Do you mean—there's another?" His heart stopped beating, but his words came with a force of their own.

"Yes."

"Who is it?"

"It's Richard."

"Gorman?"

"Yes, Richard Gorman."

He dropped her hand which he had taken in his and looked out of the window into the street. As far as he was concerned the visit was over—as were a number of other things, among them this striving after promotion, achievement, possessions. He was ready to go back to Sparta. The treadmill, it had once seemed in his impatience; the treadmill it was indeed now, and good enough.

"Mr. Dorset, you do not understand. I never knew. You never told me."

"If I had told you I would have thought myself a cad."

His voice was quite level. The depression of the past years had come back. It was the same losing fight he had known since coming home from the war—fighting like a demon for a goal and losing after he had won. It was like the war, anyway—if you won you lost. Why fight then?

As he stood there he saw himself passing in review before his own eyes. He was eight years away from the dreams that had enrolled him as a freshman in college, one whose real freshman years had gone to the hazing of the trenches, eight years away from his dreams and face-to-face with a blank wall.

He laid his hand on the knob of the front door. She was there beside him, almost in front of him.

"But John, Mr. Dorset—you can't go away like this." Her voice was tremulous.

John Dorset whirled in the doorway for an impulsive speech but smiled wearily instead and extended his hand. He was always whirling to say impulsive things, it was his natural way—but this teacher in him was learning to reject them because of the futility of speech.

"I wish you happiness, Miss DeVoe," he said evenly, "you and Richard. I am catching the train in 20 minutes for Chicago, back to the university for another summer. I think my old job in the cafeteria will be waiting for me. Good-by."

On board the Chicago Limited he opened the last Atlanta paper he was to read for some time. The Constitution, just from the press, carried an amazing story on the front page. From a rectangular box three columns wide, in bold black type, his own name leaped at him. The box read:

Roving Constables

The Proposal That They be Required to Stay in Their Own Bailiwicks Has Much to Commend It.

The Allegheny County Constables' Association has recommended that the system under which these peace officers sometimes go far from their own districts to make arrests be changed. The resolution has much to commend it.

"Roving constables" have caused considerable annoyance, and the demand has been made more than once that they be required to stay in their home bailiwicks. Now that the constables themselves have gone on record in condemnation of the system, there is encouragement for the hope that something will be done about it.

The matter came prominently before the public some months ago when a constable from the eastern part of the county invaded a distant borough and made wholesale arrests for some petty infraction of the dog law. That was a characteristic example of the kind of cases on which roving constables leave their own bailiwicks. They are actuated, it is to be feared, more by a desire for fees than by love of justice.

The people elect constables for their own districts, and if these officers fail to do their duty they should be removed. Permitting outside constables to come in opens the way for petty persecution and abuse of authority.

Motive Is Laudable

But Withholding of Clearing House Figures Will Not End Lottery Unless the Police Are Vigilant.

The Pittsburgh Clearing House Association has followed the example of the New York Clearing House in deciding to withhold from publication its daily clearances so that they may not be used for gambling.

The motive is praiseworthy, but the move will be ineffectual so long as the police remain inactive. There are too many other figures that may be used instead of the bank balances.

The lottery operators are finding things a bit awkward, to be sure; but their resourcefulness is not to be underestimated. Depend upon it, if Director Clark and the police court magistrates continue to pursue the same course that they have followed ever since the "numbers" racket came into prominence as a public scandal, the racketeers will remain in business.

It is humiliating and regrettable that professional gamblers should have been permitted to bring about a situation in which the public is denied news that has long been regarded as an important index to the condition of business.

The action of the banks serves notice on the public authorities that Pittsburgh's businessmen look upon the "numbers" racket with stern disapproval.

Garbage Contract

It Is Unfortunate That the Low Bidder Was Without Equipment for Immediate Operation.

It is a pity that the newly organized Modern Service Company, which offered to remove Pittsburgh's garbage and rubbish for $100,000 a year less than competing concerns asked, could not receive the contract. A hundred thousand dollars a year is a lot of money, even in a city like Pittsburgh.

But Controller Kerr, Director Maits, of the Health Department, and City Solicitor Waldschmidt were justified in advising against giving the contract to the Modern Service Company, in view of the company's lack of a plant and equipment.

The company, it is true, proposed to operate in a makeshift way until it could build incinerators. But garbage disposal is too important a matter to be handled in a makeshift or experimental manner.

The low bid has served a good purpose, at any rate, and next year the outcome of the bidding may be different.

Ugliness in Coal Towns

Anthracite Operators Have Started a Movement, which Might Well be Taken up Here, to Beautify Villages.

Several years ago, under the auspices of the Sun-Telegraph, Fannie Hurst, the famous novelist, made a tour of coal mining towns around Pittsburgh. She visited Moon Run, Coverdale, Vestaburg and a number of others.

Second only to the poverty which she witnessed, in shocking Miss Hurst's sensibilities, was the ugliness everywhere in evidence—the dreary company houses, frame structures, uniformly painted a cold, hard red; the huge piles of refuse from the mines; the absence of trees and verdure.

"How coal uglifies everything!" she repeatedly remarked.

Miss Hurst will be pleased—and all others who dislike ugliness—to learn that in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania there is a concerted movement under way to beautify the mining towns. The unsightly culm banks are being removed, and modern concrete structures are supplanting the old wooden breakers.

The movement might well be taken up here. Of course, the anthracite industry is better off just now than the bituminous. But a great many things, not calling for large expenditures of money, could be done to improve the appearance of the local mining villages.

Dependable Service

A Remarkable Example of Strict Maintenance of Schedule By an Airplane Comes to Light.

A remarkable example of accurate maintenance of schedule time by an aviator engaged in the delivery of mail has come to light in the story of the "tryst" kept nightly by the flier with the engineman of a train running from Pittsburgh to Buffalo.

At 2:07 every morning the train shoots out of a tunnel, the engineman looks aloft, sees the flier, and they signal to each other with their lights. The engineman says if he failed to see the airplane at the appointed time he would be so fearful of a mishap that he would be tempted to stop at the next station and send a message of inquiry.

With such a record at this to point to—especially notable because the flying is at night—aviators may proudly boast that the reliability of airplane service is now beyond question.

What is more powerful than money, more attractive than beauty and more compelling than genius?

PERSONALITY. And please don't get that confused with "IT."

Personality is neither physical magnetism nor sex-appeal, although it may go hand-in-hand with these. It is not genius, nor brains, nor even originality. It is not individuality; because many a very "individual" person may have a most repellant personality—or no personality at all!

* * *

Personality has no age-limit and no social favorites. You will find it in a cook or a queen; in an infant or an octogenarian.

* * *

Many people confuse personality with eccentricity or with audacity. They think it means being "different"—wearing spats or a monacle or flashy cravats. Or being haughty or bluff or impudent or witty. But personality and pose are as far apart as Elysium and Broadway.

Who are the outstanding "personalities" today?

On the stage—Mrs. Fiske. She steps upon the scene; and, before she speaks, every beautiful young actress fades out of the picture.

* * *

On the screen—Marie Dressler. Put her in a picture with the most beautiful and talented actress in the world and she will dominate every reel. Give her a dull line to speak, and presto, she gives it life and makes it scintillate. She could make you laugh or weep at a census report.

* * *

Most geniuses are shy, dull and colorless outside of their work. Most great writers and artists are diffident and ingrowing. Most actors and actresses are self-conscious or affected off the stage. They are like curtained windows; the personality does not shine through. Yet I sometimes think that EVERYBODY might have personality if he or she did not hide it behind a screen of timidity or fear or egotism or vanity.

* * *

PERSONALITY is the one magic gift of which time and age cannot Rob you! Beauty fades, genius burns out, wit grows stale or dull—but personality is YOURS from the cradle to the grave. Those who have it have eternal youth!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—Thoughts while strolling. Who remembers when people held their breath passing a house that had a contagious disease sign? The inside of the Chrysler Building looks like salami. I like that song lyric: "Just a cheerful little earful of the well known I love you."

Berton Braley, a Madison, Wis., boy, who made good in the city. A pocket watch running in a bowl of water. Not enough meringue on New York's lemon pies. There's an exemplar of the new feminine freedom—a lady in spats. Ina Claire has a California tan.

Midgets are always nattily attired. W. G. Shephard, a great reporter. Wish I could hear Nora Bayes sing "Shine on Harvest Moon" again. Somebody should star Patsy Kelly. Gilbert Miller looks like Lord Birkenhead. The long and the short of it—Fannie Brice and Billy Rose. To Paul Whiteman: Come on home.

Who remembers when a wish was not a yen? They say Lindbergh can go for a chocolate malted milk. Moss and Fontana are about the only ballroom dancers left. A few more weeks and another birthday. I can never remember the meaning of fata morgana. Edna Leedom.

Big Bill Edwards is reputed a marvelous dancer. What's become of the bloods who used to wear gloves in upper coat pocket? Nothing looks so frisky as a white poodle after a bath. Nobody to me expresses the languor of beauty like Mrs. Irving Berlin.

What happened to Dolores, the Ziegfeld show girl? Who learned to walk that way balancing heavy books upon her head. Shuddery to think of the unsolvable murders in this town. And the unspeakable graft. Anyway it soft-pedaled stage cracks about Chicago.

A drum beats. And the thin note of a fife—but it's only the ballyhoo for a movie. Everywhere sham. Fake antique shops, double-crossers, ship scuttlers and cut-throats. Still life is pretty grand. And I wouldn't be this way if I hadn't stuffed myself with sausage for breakfast.

* * *

Vagrant thought: I have never yet visited a town where they had no sidewalks that it didn't pour down rain.

* * *

Eddie Cantor discovers one business that will show a profit for the fiscal year—the manufacturing of red ink.

* * *

Mr. Marquis with his original "Who's Who" upset a cart of apples. Everyday notables are solicited for data on new variants of the idea—"Who's Who on Park Avenue," "Who's Who Below Fourteenth street," "Who's Who in Wall Street," "Who's Who in Hollywood" and to top it all today came a questionnaire from a "Who's Who on the Ohio River."

* * *

As a minor trailer of sartorial hoopla nothing to my notion is so utterly don't carish as a huge, belted canary colored camel's hair coat with enormous patch pockets. Touched off with a white muffler it's the last gasp.

* * *

He is the pronounced molar type greeting you with: "Lo, young fruit!" And also taps cigaret ends on his wrist, stops now and then to lift his hat and flirt back his hair. Furthermore, this morning he removed a handkerchief from his cuff to wipe his hands after knocking a taxi driver for a loop who yelled: "Yoo hoo!" in falsetto. Moral: You can't always tell.

* * *

Homer Croy's original trick of reaching into a goldfish bowl and eating a slice of carrot which he had hidden and which he wriggled to his mouth is now featured in a half dozen vaudeville skits. The first time Croy pulled it was at a dinner party in the red plush parlor of a Missouri cross-roads home. It resulted in Courtney Ryley Cooper, another guest, being rushed all the way to Kansas City Hospital to stop him from gagging. He greens under the gills now when it is mentioned.

One of the reasons why Christmas to grown ups is such a dud is that most of us are harking back to the adolescent fun we had opening our presents around the old base-burner—the base-burner topped by a brass Hercules defying, well, whatever Herc defies. Or maybe it was Ajax. I know so little of botany.

Lorentz, Forerunner of Einstein

By Archibald Henderson

One of the most creative contributors in the field of modern physics and relativity, to whom less than his due has been accorded, is Hendrik Antoon Lorentz, of Holland. This leader among the physicists of Holland, and only recently deceased, was born at Arnheim, July 18, 1853.

He was educated at the University of Leyden, and after graduation taught for six years in the night school of his native town. So brilliant was his work and so rapid his development, that at the early age of 25 he was appointed professor of mathematical physics at his alma mater. At the time of his death, he was recognized universally as one of the most distinguished of contemporary physicists.

In 1906, his lectures at Columbia University on the electron theory attracted wide attention, these lectures being later published in book form. In 1907 and again in 1909 he directed the Dutch scientific expeditions to New Guinea. Notable honors have been paid him, but he is not fully recognized, it appears, as a forerunner and almost joint author with Einstein of the special theory of relativity.

On December 11, 1900, the scientific world celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his doctorate. In 1902 the Academy of Sciences at Stockholm divided the Nobel prize for physics between Lorentz and one of his gifted pupils, Zeeman. In 1912-13 he delivered a course of lectures in mathematical physics in the College de France, Paris.

In his study of the electron, Lorentz made epochal contributions. He worked out a series of equations of the first importance connecting the times, distances and velocities of electrons in uniform motion with respect to each other.

Although his interpretation of these equations differed from that given them by Einstein, they subsequently formed the basis of Einstein's first or special theory of relativity. Indeed, these very equations now bear the name in his honor, of the Lorentz Transformation. They constitute the very foundation of the theory of relativity.

Lorentz anticipated Niels Bohr in studying the movements of the electrons inside the atom. The atom is a little solar system of its own; but the difference which exists between the dimensions of an atom and an electron is much greater than that which exists between the size of the sun and the earth.

Sir Oliver Lodge has stated that if an electron were enlarged so as to be the size of a point or 0.25 mm. in diameter, then by the same scale an atom would be magnified to form a building 60 meters long, 30 wide and 15 high.

According to the theory of Lorentz, the complexity of the light emitted by a body is due to the complexity of the atom. Each electron constitutes an excitator similar to the excitators of wireless telegraphy, and sends out waves only differing from the electromagnetic waves emitted, for instance, by the Eiffel Tower in the extreme shortness of their length.

Zeeman, the pupil of Lorentz, confirmed by experiment the latter's theory that light emitted by a body is modified under the action of a strong electric field. The work of Lorentz, supported by Zeeman, has doubled the strength of spectrum analysis for investigating radiation and the properties of atoms.

Isn't It So?

Fortune can take nothing from us but what she gave us.

The woman who says her face is her fortune naturally admires her own check.

All men are inclined to yearn for wealth, but some of us have greater yearning capacity than others.

Text For Today Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you and learn of Me. For My yoke is easy and My burden is light.—St. Matthew, xi:28, 30.

(The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Dr. Percival H. Barker, pastor, Point Breeze Presbyterian Church.)

Time Changes Our Face

Two Pictures of Poland's Great Paderewski Taken 53 Years Apart.

PADEREWSKI AT 18.

Paderewski, great Polish genius, is in America, and many will have the privilege of seeing and hearing him.

At 71 years of age he retains the emotion and power of youth.

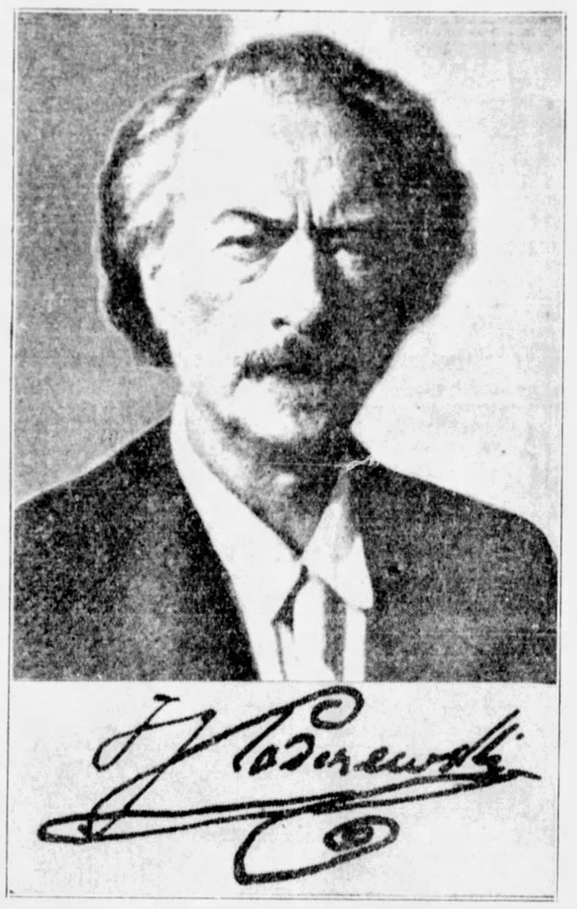
Time has not injured the perfect co-ordination of thought, brain, nerve and muscles.

He walks across the stage to his piano, as he did recently at Carnegie Hall, New York, playing for the Young People's Philharmonic-Symphony Concert, as straight as an arrow.

The great crowd, filling every seat, applauded and cheered, every man, woman and child standing to welcome him, and Paderewski's face was that of a young man. The soul does not grow old.

In these two pictures of Paderewski, one as a boy of 18, the other, as he appears today, you see how interestingly time writes upon the faces of human beings.

We say that TIME writes, but it is really our thoughts that write, on our faces, the story of the years.



PADEREWSKI TODAY AT 71.

If we drift through life, the face becomes a blank, the possibilities that were in the childish face fading from it.

If we think, strive and struggle through life, the face becomes a complicated map of experiences and efforts.

You will rarely see a more interesting change in the face of a man than is shown in this picture of Paderewski, first the Polish boy, starting out, hoping to become a musician, and then Paderewski, the great Polish genius, who stands alone, in a place all his own, and in addition to his musical work, as composer and interpreter, was prime minister and secretary of state for Poland during the troublesome years.

As he played in New York recently, it would have done your heart good to see an old man and his wife, sitting in the front row, watching him as affectionately as though he had been their only child. They also were Poles, and when he ceased playing, the man and woman, both older than he, stood and applauded unceasingly, while younger enthusiasts grew tired.

To do anything worth while in this world is difficult.

But great is the happiness of those that achieve what seems impossible. Happy are they in being able to say that they have HONORED THEIR FATHER AND THEIR MOTHER.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

At times you think the boss is unnecessarily severe and exacting.

You cannot understand why he is so eager to save time and material.

You have never watched as he has how small amounts grow to big sums.

If you had as much money as he, you think you would not be so penurious.

You would not demand so much from your employes.

Possibly the reason you are still an employe is because you have not practiced little economies and could not understand the employer's viewpoint.

Throughout your life you have had opportunities to improve your position and enlarge your bank account, but that needed money you hadn't saved.

If you conducted your affairs on a business basis you might, even though your salary is small, have had a nest egg of savings.

The practical man annoys you.

But if it were not for such men, neither you nor hosts of other men would possess your kind of opportunities to earn a living.
